Measuring Noncognitive Variables William Sedlacek, 2023-07-03 Co published in association with Big Picture Learning Measuring Noncognitive Variables Improving Admissions Success and Retention for Underrepresented Students is written for admissions professionals counselors faculty and advisers who admit teach or work with students during the admissions process and post enrollment period It brings together theory research and practice related to noncognitive variables in a practical way by using assessment methods provided at no cost Noncognitive variables have been shown to correlate with the academic success of students of all races cultures and backgrounds Noncognitive variables include personal and social dimensions adjustment motivation and student perceptions rather than the traditional verbal and quantitative areas often called cognitive typically measured by standardized tests Key Features include Models that raise concepts related to innovation diversity and racism in proactive ways Examples of admission and post enrollment applications that show how schools and programs can use noncognitive variables in a variety of ways Additional examples from foundations professional associations and K 12 programs An overview of the limitations of traditional assessment methods such as admission tests grades and courses taken Education professionals involved in the admissions process will find this guide effectively informs their practice This guide is also appropriate as a textbook in a range of courses offered in Higher Education and Student Affairs Masters and PhD programs Difficult Subjects Badia Ahad-Legardy, OiYan A. Poon, 2023-07-03 Difficult Subjects Insights and Strategies for Teaching about Race Sexuality and Gender is a collection of essays from scholars across disciplines institutions and ranks that offers diverse and multi faceted approaches to teaching about subjects that prove both challenging and often uncomfortable for both the professor and the student It encourages college educators to engage in forms of practice that do not pretend that teachers and students are unaffected by world events and incidents that highlight social inequalities Readers will find the collected essays useful for identifying new approaches to taking on the difficult subjects of race gender and sexuality The book will also serve as inspiration for academics who believe that their area of study does not allow for such pedagogical inquiries to also teach in ways that address difficult subjects Contributors to this volume span a range of disciplines from criminal justice to gender studies to organic chemistry and demonstrate the productive possibilities that can emerge in college classrooms when faculty consider identity as constitutive of rather than divorced from their academic disciplines Discussions of race gender and sexuality are always hot button issues in the college classroom whether they emerge in response to a national event or tragedy or constitute the content of the class over a semester long term Even seasoned professors who specialize in these areas find it difficult to talk about identity politics in a room full of students And many professors for whom issues of racial and sexual identity is not a primary concern find it even more challenging to raise these issues with students Offering reflections and practical guidance the book accounts for a range of challenges facing college educators and encourages faculty to teach with courage and conviction especially when it feels as though the world around us is crashing down upon our students and ourselves
