Aegean Strategies Studies Of Culture And Environment On The European Fringe:

Aegean Strategies P. Nick Kardulias, Mark T. Shutes, 1997 With a long detailed historical record a large corpus of archaeological data and more recently a number of sophisticated analyses of current and previous environmental conditions the Aegean region of the eastern Mediterranean offers a unique setting to explore the evolution of a landscape through time As expanding world markets continue to encroach upon even the most remote and delicate ecological zones anthropologists across all sub disciplines are beginning to find common theoretical and methodological ground within their own discipline and with other ecologically oriented sciences This volume examines the value of such collaborative research by bringing together archaeologists cultural anthropologists ethnoarchaeologists and ecologists to discuss environmentally related issues that affect the European fringe with an emphasis on the Aegean region The contributors bring to light the subtleties involved in understanding the interactive relationship between humans and their environment over time Students and scholars in a variety of disciplines including anthropology ecology classics and history will find this book to be a valuable and original investigation of a dynamic and complex region

Two Oxen Ahead Paul Halstead, 2014-04-07 TWO OXEN AHEAD This revealing study of farming practices in societies around the Mediterranean draws out the valuable contribution that knowledge of recent practices can make to our understanding of husbandry in prehistoric and Greco Roman times It reflects increased academic interest in the formative influence of farming regimes on the societies they were designed to feed The author's intensive research took him to farming communities around the Mediterranean where he recorded observational and interview data on differing farming strategies and practices many of which can be traced back to classical antiquity or earlier The book documents these variables through the annual cycle from ploughing and sowing to harvesting and threshing interannual schemes of crop rotation and husbandry and the generational cycle of household development It traces the interdependence of these successive stages and explores how cultural tradition ecological conditions and access to resources shape variability in husbandry practice Each chapter identifies ways in which heuristic use of data on recent farming can shed light on ancient practices and societies

Subsistence Strategies and Craft Production at the Ancient Egyptian Ramesside Fort of Zawiyet Umm el-Rakham Nicky Nielsen, 2023-12-28 Drawing on more than 20 years of archaeological study and investigation at Zawiyet Umm el Rakham by a team from the University of Liverpool led by Professor Steven Snape this book paints a nuanced picture of daily life not only at this liminal military site but also in Ramesside Egypt more broadly Constructed during the reign of Ramesses II the fortified settlement was situated 300 kilometres west of Alexandria and represents the furthest western outpost of the Egyptian New Kingdom empire Excavations in Area K of the fortress have uncovered extensive evidence for the living arrangements minor industries food production and daily life of the fort's inhabitants This previously unpublished material forms the bedrock of this volume which focuses on analysing the various subsistence and craft production strategies that were conducted alongside each other in this area from baking brewing and butchery to lithics working bone carving and weaving These traces of the activities of the soldiers and their families shed new light on what life was like at this military installation and for ordinary Egyptians more widely shifting away from a focus on elite social groups The archaeological evidence covered in this book prompts a re evaluation of the realities of the relationship between Egyptians and Libyans at the close of the Late Bronze Age The purpose of the fortress construction was primarily defensive however the surviving material points to co operation by means of collaborative farming and trading and provides a direct counterpoint to the more belligerent contemporary royal monumental inscriptions describing Egypto Libyan relations

A Companion to the Environmental History of Byzantium ,2024-03-04 How did humans and the environment impact each other in the medieval Eastern Mediterranean How did global climatic fluctuations affect the Byzantine Empire over the course of a millennium And how did the transmission of pathogens across long distances affect humans and animals during this period This book tackles these and other questions about the intersection of human and natural history in a systematic way Bringing together analyses of historical archaeological and natural scientific evidence specialists from across these fields have contributed to this volume to outline the new discipline of Byzantine environmental history Contributors are Johan Bakker Henriette Baron Chryssa Bourbou James Crow Michael J Decker Warren J Eastwood Dominik Fleitmann John Haldon Adam Izdebski Eva Kaptijn J rg Luterbacher Henry Maguire Mischa Meier Lee Mordechai Jeroen Poblome Johannes Preiser Kapeller Abigail Sargent Peter Talloen Costas Tsiamis Ralf Vandam Myrto Veikou Sam White and Elena Xoplaki

The Ecology of Pastoralism P. Nick Kardulias,2015-04-01 In The Ecology of Pastoralism diverse contributions from archaeologists and ethnographers address pastoralism s significant impact on humanity s basic subsistence and survival focusing on the network of social political and religious institutions existing within various societies dependent on animal husbandry Pastoral peoples both past and present have organized their relationships with certain animals to maximize their ability to survive and adapt to a wide range of conditions over time Contributors show that despite differences in landscape environment and administrative and political structures these societies share a major characteristic high flexibility Based partially on the adaptability of various domestic animals to difficult environments and partially on the ability of people to establish networks allowing them to accommodate political social and economic needs this flexibility is key to the survival of complex pastoral systems and serves as the connection among the varied cultures in the volume In The Ecology of Pastoralism a variety of case studies from a broad geographic sampling uses archaeological and contemporary data and offers a new perspective on the study of pastoralism making this volume a valuable contribution to current research in the area

out why It emphasizes the roles of landscape external contacts social identity construction and historical consciousness in producing this difference bringing together the wealth of new archaeological evidence available from the island with a variety of ancient text sources to produce a vivid and up to date picture of this momentous period in Crete s history

Written in Stone P. Nick Kardulias, Richard W. Yerkes, 2003-01-01 Written in Stone The Multiple Dimensions of Lithic Analysis demonstrates the vitality of contemporary lithics analysis by examining material from a variety of geographical locations This edited collection is primarily concerned with the link between craft production and social complexity the nature of trade and the delineation of settlement patterns and manipulation of landscape While deconstructing the present to reconstruct the past each chapter incorporates a technological dimension shaped by the type of analysis utilized Methods include microwear analysis which adds significant understanding of stone tool function to the identification of obsidian sources which illustrates the potential of lithic provenance studies for reconstructing trade This book verifies and expands on the notion that lithics play an integral role in our understanding of past societies at all levels of complexity from Paleolithic hunter gatherers to archaic states World Ecological Degradation Sing C. Chew, 2001 Deforestation soil runoff salination pollution While recurrent themes of the contemporary world they are not new to us In this broad sweeping review of the environmental impacts of human settlement and development worldwide over the past 5 000 years Sing C Chew shows that these processes are as old as civilization itself With examples ranging from Ancient Mesopotamia to Malaya Mycenaean Greece to Ming China Chew shows that the processes of population growth intensive resource accumulation and urbanization in ancient and modern societies almost universally bring on ecological disaster which often contributes to the decline and fall of that society He then turns his eye to the development of the modern European world system and its impact on the environment Challenging us to change these long term trends Chew also traces the existence of environmental conservation ideas and movements over the span of 5 000 years Can we do it Look at Chew s evidence of the past five millennia and decide Ideal for courses in environmental history anthropology and sociology and world systems theory Diachrony José M. González, 2015-12-14 Not a few of the more prominent and persistent controversies among classical scholars about approaches and methods arise from a failure to appreciate the fundamental role of time in structuring the interpretation of Greek culture Diachrony showcases the corresponding importance of diachronic models for the study of ancient Greek literature and culture Diachronic models of culture reach beyond mere historical change to the systemically evolving dynamics of cultural institutions practices and artifacts The papers collected here illustrate the construction and proper use of such models They emphasize the complementarity of synchronic and diachronic perspectives and highlight the need to assess how well diachronic models fit history The contributors to this volume strive to be methodologically explicit as they tackle a wide range of subjects with a variety of diachronic approaches Their work shows both the difficulty and the promise of diachronic analysis Our incomplete knowledge of Greek antiquity throughout time and the Greeks own preoccupation with the past in the construction of their present make diachronic analysis not just invaluable but indispensable for the study of ancient Greek literature and culture

Social Change in Town and Country in Eleventh-Century Byzantium James Howard-Johnston, 2020-09-10

The history of Byzantium pivots around the eleventh century during which it reached its apogee in terms of power prestige and territorial extension only then to plunge into steep political decline following serious military defeats and extensive territorial losses The political economic and intellectual history of the period is reasonably well understood but not so what was happening in that crucial intermediary sphere the social order which both shaped and was shaped by contemporary ideas and brute economic developments This volume aims to deepen understanding of Byzantine society by examining material evidence for settlements and production in different regions and by sifting through the far from plentiful literary and documentary sources in order to track what was happening in town and country There is evidence of significant change the pattern of landownership continued to shift in favour of those with power and wealth but there was sustained and effective resistance from peasant villages Provincial towns prospered in what was an era of sustained economic growth and through newly emboldened local elites took a more active part in public affairs In the capital the middling classes comprising much of officialdom and leading traders gained in importance while the twin military and civilian elites were merging to form a single governing class However despite this social upheaval careful analysis of these various factors by a range of leading Byzantine historians and archaeologists leads to the overarching conclusion that it was not so much internal structural changes which contributed to the vertiginous decline suffered by Byzantium in the late eleventh century as the unprecedented combination of dangerous adversaries on different fronts in the east north and west
