Building A Better Nest Living Lightly At Home And In The World:

Building a Better Nest Evelyn Searle Hess, 2015 For fifteen years Evelyn Hess and her husband David lived in a tent and trailer without electricity or running water on twenty acres of wild land in the foothills of the Oregon Coast Range When they decided to build a house a real house at last they knew it would have to respect the lessons of simple living that they learned in their camping life They knew they could not do it alone Building a Better Nest chronicles their adventures as they begin to construct a house of their own seeking a model for sustainable living not just in their home but beyond its walls What does it mean to build a better nest Better for whom Is it better for the individual or family The planet Green building and sustainable design are popular buzzwords but to Hess sustainable building is not a simple matter of buying and installing the latest recycled flooring products It is also about cooperative work working together in employment in research in activism and in life Hess is concerned with her local watershed but also with the widening income gap disappearing species and peak resources She actively works to reduce overconsumption and waste For Hess these problems are both philosophical and practical As Hess and her husband age the questions of how to live responsibly arise with greater frequency and urgency With unfailing wit and humor she looks for answers in such places as neuroscience Buddhism and her ancestral legacy Building a Better Nest will appeal to anyone with an interest in sustainable building off grid living or alternative communities The questions it asks about the way we live are earnest and important from an author whose voice is steeped in wisdom and gratitude

Shoulder to Shoulder Evelyn Searle Hess, 2021-05-15 Our current moment is filled with despair about climate crises and the possibility of coming to any kind of agreement that might change the dire outcomes In this important antidote to the paralysis of hopelessness Shoulder to Shoulder offers hope and a path forward in telling the stories of communities in Western North America who learned to talk to each other and to solve the conflicts between stakeholders Loggers cattle ranchers river keepers corporate developers tree huggers and indigenous peoples from many tribes are just a few of the real people in these stories of hope for our climate This book is for anyone wanting to make a difference anyone looking for camaraderie with others of like mind anyone believing that democracy requires engaged citizenship anyone looking for hope The message throughout is that progress can be made when large numbers of caring involved thinking co operative people come together to protect both democracy and a livable planet By working shoulder to shoulder we can make positive change happen
