Building Literacy in Social Studies Donna Ogle,Ron Klemp,2007-04-15 Preparing students to be active informed literate citizens is one of the primary functions of public schools But how can students become engaged citizens if they can't read let alone understand their social studies texts What can educators and social studies teachers in particular do to help students develop the knowledge skills and motivation to become engaged in civic life Building Literacy in Social Studies addresses this question by presenting both the underlying concepts and the research based techniques that teachers can use to engage students and build the skills they need to become successful readers critical thinkers and active citizens The authors provide targeted strategies including teaching models graphic organizers and step by step instructions for activities such as Building vocabulary Developing textbook literacy skills Interpreting primary and secondary sources Applying critical thinking skills to newspapers and magazines and Evaluating Internet sources Readers will also learn how to organize classrooms into models of democracy by creating learning communities that support literacy instruction distribute authority encourage cooperation and increase accountability among students Realistic scenarios depict a typical social studies teacher's experience before and after implementing the strategies in the classroom showing their potential to make a significant difference in how students respond to instruction By making literacy strategies a vital part of content area instruction teachers not only help students better understand their schoolwork but also open students' eyes to the power that informed and engaged people have to change the world

Reading in Secondary Content Areas Zhihui Fang, Mary Schleppegrell, 2008 What does it mean to teach reading in the context of the middle and high school classroom Don't students already know how to read by the time they get to secondary school And how can a busy teacher take time away from the packed curriculum of science history mathematics or language arts to teach reading This book presents a linguistic approach to teaching reading in different subjects an approach that focuses on language itself Central to this approach is a view that knowledge is constructed in and through language and that language changes with changes in knowledge As students move from elementary to secondary schools they encounter specialized knowledge and engage in new contexts of learning in all subjects This means that the language of secondary school learning is quite different from the language of the elementary years While in the elementary years the subject matter of reading materials is often close to students' everyday life experiences the curriculum of secondary school deals with knowledge that is removed from students' personal lives and everyday contexts The language that constructs this more specialized knowledge thus tends to be more abstract technical information laden and hierarchically organized than the more familiar and friendly language that students typically encounter during the elementary years Students need to develop specialized literacies literacy relevant to each content area as well as a critical literacy they can use across subject areas to engage with reflect on and assess specialized and advanced knowledge This functional language analysis approach is shown using actual secondary social studies science and math textbooks and using a literary text

Constructions of Literacy Elizabeth Birr Moje, David G. O'Brien, 2000-08 Explores represents through a series of cases commentaries how why secondary school teachers students use literacy speaking listening reading writing performing in formal informal settings how these literacies are negotiated used
