Assessment Practices

Types of Assessments

- 1. Diagnostic: assess a learner's knowledge and skills before instruction begins to identify strengths and needs so that the teacher can modify instruction accordingly (Kagan, 2009).
- 2. Formative: designed to help students identify areas that need more instruction, supporting the day-to-day learning process (Kagan, 2009).
- 3. Summative: determine learner's achievement at the end of a unit, semester, or course, measuring their learning at the end of the term and comparing it to state standards (Kagan, 2009).

"Language is the great sign of a nation. It tells you where it is, and who it is. It is the soul of a nation. It is the heart of a nation. It is the life of a nation."

—John F. Kennedy

Alignment of Assessment

Assessment is a key component of the learning process. It is a way to measure a learner's knowledge and skills, and to identify areas where they need more instruction. Assessment can be used in many ways, from diagnostic to formative to summative. Each type of assessment has its own strengths and weaknesses, and it is important to choose the right type of assessment for the right situation. Assessment should be used to support learning, not to punish or to label. It should be used to help learners understand their own learning and to identify areas where they need more help. Assessment should be used to help teachers understand their students and to plan instruction accordingly. Assessment should be used to help schools and districts understand how well they are doing and to make improvements where needed.
