Assessment is at the heart of our learning programme. It is a way of finding out how well we are doing and what we need to improve. It is also a way of giving us feedback on our work and helping us to learn from our mistakes.

There are many different ways to assess our learning. Some are more formal, like tests and exams. Others are more informal, like class discussions and group work. The key is to use a range of different strategies to get a good picture of our learning.

Setting Assessment Rules

It is important to set clear rules for assessment from the beginning. This helps to ensure that all pupils are aware of the expectations and that the assessment process is fair and consistent.

Some of the rules that should be set include:

- When and how often assessments will be carried out
- What types of assessments will be used
- How assessments will be marked and graded
- How pupils can appeal a grade

It is also important to communicate these rules to all pupils and to ensure that they understand them. This can be done through a class discussion or by providing a written copy of the rules.

Once the rules have been set, it is important to stick to them. This helps to ensure that the assessment process is fair and consistent for all pupils.
