

The Parents' Guide to Raising Multi-literate Children

What if I told you that you could teach your child to read and write in their home language(s) AND create fun memories together?

Children often learn to read and write in school, taught by trained teachers who learnt everything about what, when, and how to teach these skills. When a child is surrounded by their peers all going through the same experience, and everything in their environment is in the community language, it legitimates the necessity to learn them. But when it comes to your home language(s) you cannot rely on this anymore and therefore cannot teach your child to read and write in the same way.

Yoshito Darmon-Shimamori is a language teacher who grew up bilingual French-Japanese, and learnt to read and write in Japanese in France. His decade long professional experience combined with his personal bilingual journey has assisted him in teaching his trilingual sons to read and write in French and Korean while tightening their bonds. He has put together this step-by-step guide to enable you to ignite the inner desire in your child to learn to read and write in their home language(s).

The Parents' Guide to Raising Multi-literate Children:

helps you understand the psychological barriers multilingual children face contains 70+ activities to help you create bonding AND educational time with your child (aged 7 and above).
explains the teaching principles to follow, and displays the pedagogical value of each activity to ensure good quality learning takes place.

Now, go have some fun!
