

Advance—Photoplay Patterns

Advance produced a line of patterns that was featured monthly in the movie fan magazine Photoplay. The styles were created by Hollywood costume designers and worn by movie stars in their film roles. The envelope graphics on these patterns changed numerous times from 1948-1954, as did the numbering sequences. The Advance company name was missing the patterns from the late 1940s, but the patterns from the 1950s were packaged in Advance envelopes and were included in their counter catalogs.

Not enough information has surfaced to know who paid for the patterns' manufacture and whether the designers' movie studios or Photoplay magazine received any royalties from the patterns' sales.

Beauty—American Designer Originals

This pattern series, which began in 1946 and continued into the early 1950s, was the first to license designers' names in the 1940s. The patterns were featured and sold through local newspapers around the United States, with such designers as Vera Maxwell, Muriel King, and Renard Hollywood. This licensed designer series preceded Vogue's highly-lauded Pattern Original Models by three years.

Butterick—Starie Stephens Originals

Butterick licensed their first collection of campus-designed styles, Starie Stephens Originals, in the Fall of 1950. These "college-campus fashions in junior sizes were created by outstanding student-designers of Stephens College, Columbia, MO." The initial production included nine designs by seven students. Practical Home Economics reported in January 1951 that "...[Student designers voted to allow a portion of their royalties to a scholarship fund and to the improvement of the facilities of the department.]"
