1. The first step in the process of DNA replication is the unwinding of the double helix. This is done by the enzyme helicase, which breaks the hydrogen bonds between the base pairs.

2. Once the double helix is unwound, the two strands are separated. Each strand then serves as a template for the synthesis of a new complementary strand.

3. The new strands are synthesized in the 5' to 3' direction. This is done by the enzyme DNA polymerase, which adds nucleotides to the growing strand.

4. The process of DNA replication is semi-conservative. This means that each new DNA molecule consists of one original strand and one newly synthesized strand.

5. The final step in the process is the proofreading and correction of any errors. This is done by the enzyme DNA proofreading, which checks the newly synthesized strand for mistakes.

6. The process of DNA replication is essential for the growth and development of all living organisms. It ensures that each new cell receives a complete set of genetic information.
