When a patient is referred to the clinic, the first step is to take a history and perform a physical examination. The patient's medical history, including any previous episodes of seizures, is reviewed. A physical examination is performed to look for any signs of neurological dysfunction. The patient's vital signs are also checked. The next step is to perform a neurological examination, which includes testing of the patient's reflexes, sensation, and motor function. The patient's mental status is also assessed. The results of the examination are then used to determine the patient's diagnosis and to develop a treatment plan. The patient is then referred to a neurologist for further evaluation and treatment.
