

NETHER PORTAL

FUNCTION

Nether portal blocks are the swirly purple stuff that's generated in the centre of a portal frame – with obsidian (34-37) blocks. There's only one reason to build yourself a Nether portal to travel to and from the sinister Nether dimension.

But why would you want to go to the Nether if it's such an unpleasant place? Well, there are many good reasons – it's the source of several useful materials.

BEHAVIOUR

Nether portal blocks give off a purple particle effect when activated, as well as making a distinctively creepy sound. Unless you're cheating, you can't actually pick up Nether portal blocks and they'll disappear when the frame around them is broken. Pretty mysterious, eh? They can also be destroyed by a good old-fashioned explosion, or a flood of water.
