

Surface Weather Map Showing Storm System in the Eastern United States

Warm air advection occurs where the cold front approaches together the warm (relative to lower latitude) air mass. Thus, warm air is being transported northward in a southerly direction by the low-level winds. Based on this fact alone, one would expect precipitation at that location to be rising, cloud air will rise above other air (the cold front approaches from lower latitude) relative to higher (warmer) air mass. Thus, colder air being transported by the wind to a warmer location produces falling temperatures.

Based on wind directions and the isobars pattern on the Figure 2 map, determine the type of air advection (warm or cold) that would be occurring at each station.
