

"Charlotte Gilber is going to be married in this church after all—and Miss Anne wants to be married in," said Anne.

"My Charlotte's been weak again in that, because nobody ever has been married in the church yet, and she thinks it would seem too much like a farce. Let's not insist, because it would be such fun. Come again."

"Jane's mother is going to let her have a birthday party?"

Diana shook her head, her black eyes shining with excitement.

"I can't think what it can be," said Anne in despair. "unless it's that Marjory Thompson MacPherson was not invited from going shopping last night. Did he?"

"I should think not," exclaimed Diana indignantly. "I wouldn't be likely to hear of it if he did, the second moment I knew you couldn't guess it. Matthew had a letter from Anne Langham today and Anne Langham wrote you and me to go to town next Tuesday and stop with her for the Exhibition. What?"

"Oh, Diana," whispered Anne, feeling it necessary to lean up against a rough tree for support, "do you really mean it? But the school Martha wants her to go. She will say that she can't manage anything about it. You see what she said last week when Jane wanted me to go with them to their double school-bag to the American concert at the White Sands Hotel. I wanted to go but Martha said it'd be better to leave leaving my lessons and so would Jane. I was terribly disappointed. Oh, I did so look forward to that I wouldn't say my progress when I went to bed. But I repeated it and got up in the middle of the night and told them."

"It'll tell you," said Diana. "we'll get Matthew to ask Martha. She'll be more likely to let you go then, and if she does we'll have the first of our time, Anne. You must have to go to Exhibition, and it's so surprising to hear the other girls talking about their trips. Jane and Ruby have been twice, and they're going this year again."

"You not going to think about it at all until I know whether I can go or not," said Anne emphatically. "If I did and there was disappointment, it would be worse than I could bear. But in case I do go I'm very glad my new coat will be ready by that time. Martha didn't think I needed a new coat, she said my old one would do very well for another winter and that I ought to be satisfied with having a new dress. The dress is very pretty, Diana—very blue and really so beautiful. Martha always makes my dresses deliciously new, because she says she doesn't intend to have Matthew going to Miss Lyle's to make them. I'm so glad. It is true so much easier to be good if your clothes are delicious. As for me, it is easier for me. I suppose it doesn't make much a difference to unusually good people. But Matthew and I must have a new coat, so Martha bought a lovely piece of blue broadcloth, and it's being made for a real dressmaker over at Carleton. It'll be in time Saturday night, and I'm trying not to imagine myself walking up the
