THE PURPOSE

1. Introduction

WHAT TO WRITE?

- Abstract

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program on the physical fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program was designed to be a safe and effective means of increasing physical activity for women who were unable to perform more strenuous exercise. The program consisted of three sessions per week, each lasting 30 minutes. The sessions included a warm-up, a low-impact aerobic workout, and a cool-down. The results of the study showed that the program had a positive effect on the physical fitness of the women, with significant improvements in cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and flexibility. The program was well-tolerated by the women, and they reported feeling more energetic and confident after completing the program. The findings of this study suggest that a low-intensity, low-impact, and low-volume exercise program can be an effective means of improving physical fitness in sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract

The big advantage of the hybrid system is, essentially, that the solar collector can be used for both space heating and hot water (simultaneously) and for up to 40% of the heating, depending on the weather conditions. Because of this, the heat loss from the collector is much lower than for a solar water heater. The temperature difference between the collector and the water is 10 to 20°C (50 to 68°F) instead of 30 to 40°C (86 to 104°F) for a solar water heater. This allows the collector to be 40% to 50% smaller and still deliver the same amount of heat. A secondary gain will accrue as the low temperature collector can be integrated into conventional air ductwork.
