Brought Home Hesba Stretton:

Brought Home Hesba Stretton, 2010-01 Brought Home Hesba Stretton, 2024-12 Brought Home by Hesba Stretton is a novel that delves into the emotional and moral struggles faced by individuals in the pursuit of redemption and reconciliation. The story highlights the complexities of family dynamics and personal responsibility, focusing on characters who are confronted with the consequences of their actions. As the narrative unfolds, it explores the impact of choices on relationships, particularly those involving love, guilt, and forgiveness. The novel also addresses themes of moral transformation as characters are forced to confront their past mistakes and seek personal growth. The conflict between duty and personal desires plays a significant role in the development of the characters as they navigate their inner turmoil while striving for moral integrity. The story illustrates how past mistakes can shape one's present and the journey toward atonement and healing is central to the plot. Brought Home presents a poignant exploration of the human condition where the search for redemption and the complexities of emotional relationships form the heart of the narrative. It reflects the importance of moral choices and the potential for change and growth even in the face of past wrongs.

Hesba Stretton - Brought Home
Hesba Stretton, 2018-09-06 Hesba Stretton was the pen name of Sarah Smith who was born on July 27th 1832 in Wellington Shropshire, the younger daughter of bookseller Benjamin Smith and his wife Anne Bakewell Smith, a devout Methodist. Although she and her elder sister attended the Old Hall school in town, they were largely self-educated. Smith became one of the most popular Evangelical writers of the 19th century. She used her Christian principles as a protest against specific social evils in her children's books. Her moral tales and semi-religious stories, mainly directed towards the young, were printed in huge numbers. After her sister submitted without her knowledge a story on her behalf, The Lucky Leg was a bizarre tale of a widower who proposes to women with wooden legs. Smith became a regular contributor to Household Words and All the Year Round, two popular periodicals begun by Charles Dickens. Dickens would collaborate with many writers to produce his part work stories. Smith, writing under the pseudonym Hesba Stretton, created from the initials of herself and four surviving siblings: Hannah, Elizabeth, Sarah, Benjamin, Anna, and the name of a Shropshire village. All Stretton contributed a well-regarded short story, The Ghost in the Cloak Room, as part of The Haunted House. She would go on to write over 40 novels. Her breakthrough book was Jessica's First Prayer, published in the Sunday at Home journal in 1866 and the following year as a book. By the end of the century, it had sold over one and a half million copies. To put that into context, ten times the sales of Alice in Wonderland. The book gave rise to a strand of books about homeless children in Victorian society, combining elements of the sensational novel and the religious tract, bringing the image of the poor underprivileged child into the Victorian social consciousness. A sequel, Jessica's Mother, was published in Sunday at Home in 1866 and eventually as a book some decades later in 1904. It was translated into fifteen European and Asiatic languages as well as Braille, depicted on coloured slides for magic lantern segments of Bands of Hope programmes and placed in all Russian schools by order of Tsar Alexander II. Smith became the chief writer for the Religious Tract Society Her experience of working with slum children in Manchester in the 1860s gave her books great atmosphere and of course a sense of authenticity In 1884 Smith was one of the co founders together with Lord Shaftesbury and others of the London Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children which then combined five years later with societies in other cities to form the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children Smith resigned a decade later in protest at financial mismanagement In retirement in Richmond Surrey the Smith sisters ran a branch of the Popular Book Club for working class readers Sarah Smith died on October 8th 1911 at home at Ivycroft on Ham Common She had survived her sister by eight months Brought Home Hesba Stretton,1875 Chronicles of the Schonberg-Cotta Family Elizabeth Rundle Charles,2019-12-10 In Chronicles of the Schonberg Cotta Family Elizabeth Rundle Charles intricately weaves a historical tapestry that chronicles the lives of a Protestant family in 16th century Germany amidst the backdrop of the Reformation Through richly drawn characters and vivid descriptions Charles employs a blend of narrative and epistolary style immersing readers in the spiritual and familial struggles of the Schonberg Cotta family The book effectively captures the tension of an era characterized by religious upheaval societal change and personal faith drawing upon historical events and figures with precision and artistry Charles an author deeply engaged with the theological discussions of her time drew inspiration from her own deeply rooted Christian beliefs and her interest in historical biographies Living in the 19th century during a period of renewed interest in religious histories she sought to illuminate the significance of personal piety and ethical living amidst the chaos of reform Her background as an Anglican and her commitment to the values of personal faith and family devotion inform her empathetic portrayal of her characters and their struggles This compelling narrative serves not only as a historical account but also as a profound exploration of faith and resilience Readers interested in religious history family sagas or the interplay between personal belief and societal challenges will find Charles s work both enlightening and enriching Chronicles of the Schonberg Cotta Family is a testament to the enduring human spirit in the face of crisis making it an invaluable addition to any literary collection "No place like home" Hesba Stretton,2024-12-30 THERE was not another home like it in all the parish of Broadmoor It was a half ruined hut with walls bulging outwards and a ragged roof of old thatch overgrown with moss and yellow stonecrop A rusty iron pipe in one corner served as a chimney to the flat hearth which was the only fireplace within and a very small lattice window of greenish glass with a bull s eye in each pane let in but little of the summer sunshine and hardly a gleam of the winter s gloomy light Only a few yards off the hut could not be distinguished from the ruins of an old lime kiln near which it had been built to shelter the lime burners during their intervals of work Corianton B. H. Roberts,2021-04-25 Corianton a pivotal work by B H Roberts is a compelling exploration of faith redemption and moral complexities set against a richly conceived backdrop of early American civilization Written in a narrative style that combines historical fiction with theological discourse the novel revitalizes the Book of Mormon recounting the trials of Corianton as he navigates his way through
