Characteristics of Remnant Old Growth Forests in the Northern Coast Range of Oregon and Comparison to Surrounding Landscapes Andrew N. Gray, 2011-05 Old growth forests provide unique habitat features and landscape functions compared to younger stands The goals of many forest mgmt plans in the Pacific NW include increasing the area of late successional and old growth forests This study describes existing old growth forests in the northern Oregon Coast Range that might serve as examples of desired future conditions and developmental pathways Results suggest that although old growth forests can develop along multiple pathways stand composition and productivity constrain development such that expecting all late successional stands to have the full complement of old growth attributes may not be realistic Illustrations This is a print on demand report
