Integrated Modeling of Land and Water Resources in Two African Catchments Seleshi Yalew, 2018-03-14 Demand for land and water for agriculture urbanization irrigation hydropower and industrialization is increasing to meet the demands of growing populations and of growing economies However changes in land and water resources are often studied separately A better representation of the interaction between land use change and its drivers on the one hand and water resources on the other is imperative for sustainable environmental management This research investigates and develops spatial analysis methods and tools for the quantification of dynamic feedbacks between land use change and water resources by focusing on case study catchments in Ethiopia and South Africa Furthermore the research investigates methods for analysing land use suitability and modelling land use change Results show that major changes in land use have been observed in the past two to three decades in the study catchments Model representation of the interaction between land use change and water resources shows that changes in land use influence hydrologic responses These influences are especially pronounced during high and low flow seasons Likewise hydrologic processes and water resources availability influence land use suitability and hence land use change responses Accounting for the dynamic feedback between land use and hydrology thus produces improved knowledge that can better inform integrated natural resources management Library of Congress Catalogs Library of Congress,1976 Library of Congress
