Migration,

Diaspora and Identity Georgina Tsolidis, 2013-10-07 Framed in relation to diaspora this collection engages with the subject of how cultural difference is lived and how complex and shifting identities shape and respond to spatial politics of belonging. Diaspora is understood in a variety of ways which makes this an eclectic collection of papers. Authors use various theoretical frameworks to explore diverse groups of people with a variety of experiences in a wide range of settings. They are making sense of the experiences of women and men from a range of ethnic backgrounds negotiating identities through family work and education. The micro dynamics of the everyday offer an evocative bottom up means of understanding the tensions implicit in living multiple belongings. The common thread for the collection comes from the glimpses these authors provide into the remaking of our globalized world. The aim is to shed light on racism, dislocation and alienation on the one hand and on the other hand to consider how the complex power relations within the everyday mediate a sense of resistance and hope. The papers are arranged around four themes: 1 Multiple Belongings 2 Representing a Way of Being 3 Sexualised Identifications and 4 Marriage and Family.

The Paradox(es) of Diasporic Identity, Race and Belonging Benjamin Maiangwa, 2023-10-22 This book explores how questions about home and belonging have been framed in the discourses on race, migration and social relationships. It does this with the aim of envisioning alternative modes of living and reimagining our political communities in ways that question the legacy of colonization and constructed identities which detract from our sense of obligation to each other and the planet. The book questions problematic categories of difference to transform human relations beyond the materialism of our global political economy. Questions addressed in the volume include: In what ways are combative colonial identities of difference manufactured within our national and global spaces of encounter? How can we expel the racialized and tribalized political identities that seek to purify and deny the complexities and sacredness of being human? How do we embrace the notion that everyone we encounter is a mirror reflecting our fears of suffering and our desires for happiness? The book is set in the context of re-emerging ultra nationalists and anti-migrant politicians on the national and international stage advancing various strands of extreme right and protectionist ideology couched as redemptive welfarist strategies. The adverse impacts of these strategies seem to be reifying a possessive idea of citizenship and identity engendering a national fantasy that portrays communities as homogenous entities inhabiting enclosed borders. This is essentially a compendium of conversations across the intersection of the racial, national, ethnic, spiritual and sexual boundaries in which we live.
