'We are most of us governed by epistemologies that we know to be wrong': Gregory Bateson's observation summarizes what motivates Keith Jenkins's latest book.⁽¹⁾ In this collection of essays written and published over the last 15 years (including not only a foreword by Hayden White and an afterword by Alun Munslow, but also responses from Perez Zagorin and Michael C. Coleman repudiating the postmodernist thought-style) 'wrong epistemology' defines the cognitive routines and disciplinary practices that produce historical knowledge. To anyone familiar with Jenkins's books the import of these essays will not be surprising, particularly since, both in brief comments helpfully contextualizing each essay and the particularly incisive introduction, 'History limited', he himself indicates their common synergy. Even so, precisely as a collection of occasional pieces evincing an unwavering conviction, At the Limits of History provides an occasion to reflect on the dispute between the modernist, historicizing mentality and postmodernist strategies of differentiation, and on what in this confrontation exactly is at stake.

Hegemony, the social and cultural dominance of the cognitive norms evinced in history-focussed behaviour, the practices producing historical knowledge; authority, the self-entitlement to credibility always already politically and culturally invested in the historian-function, in what it is to be a historian and to do history: these are consistently in At the Limits of History the targets of Jenkins's critique. This critique is 'crucially' indebted to Nietzsche – particularly to his insight that knowledge is inherently pragmatic, an expression of will-to-power, and to Lyotard – suggesting his findings that under postmodern conditions knowledge is validated only in performative terms (p. 169). Given, as Ernest Gellner remarks, that 'norms of knowledge provide a court of appeal for normative issues in other spheres', so that 'what ethical, political, economic and other norms are found to be acceptable, depends in the end on ... which cognitive norms are held to be compelling', the epistemological critique of the hegemony and authority of historical norms cannot but turn political.⁽²⁾ This explains why in the 1994 essay, 'Marxism and historical knowledge', Jenkins vindicates a non-historicizing conception of Marxism by stressing that society, being rather 'an incessantly mobile set of discursive (and thus contingent) relationships', is hardly a 'stable object' underpinning 'accumulating /lasting knowledge' (p. 25); why in the 2003 essay, 'On disobedient histories', he rejects a 'credible authoritative or authoritarian historicized past that one has to defer to over one's own personal history', derogates from the 'currently stultifying academic/professional doxa', and would 'prize open the mental strait-jacket of modernist historical thinking' (p. 151); why, too, in the 2004 essay, 'Modernist disavowals and postmodern reminders of the condition of history today: On Jean-François Lyotard', in order to counter

'A New Type of History' Beverley Southgate, 2015-05-22 Linking fiction with history and historical theory A New Type of History Fictional Proposals for dealing with the Past focuses on a selection of nineteenth and twentieth century novelists Tolstoy Proust John Cowper Powys Virginia Woolf Wyndham Lewis Penelope Lively and James Hamilton Paterson who have criticized scientifically based history and proposed alternative ways of approaching the past more subjective and personal colourful and imaginative and above all ethically orientated In this it is argued they have been reverting to an earlier rhetorical model for history which is now being increasingly adopted by practising historians This new type of history may lack the claimed objectivity and truth of its immediate predecessor but it opens the way for an ethically focused subject that may be used in Nietzsche's words for the purpose of life Providing a new take on both novelists and historiography and ranging widely from the nineteenth century to the present day this cross disciplinary study will be valuable reading for all those interested in the intersection and interplay between fiction and history The Operatic Archive Colleen

Renihan, 2020-04-03 The Operatic Archive American Opera as History extends the growing interdisciplinary conversation in opera studies by drawing on new research in performance studies and the philosophy of history Moving beyond traditional aesthetic conceptions of opera this book argues for opera's powerful potential for historical impact and engagement in late twentieth and twenty first century works by American composers Considering opera's ability to serve as a vehicle for memory historical experience affect presence and the historical sublime this volume demonstrates how opera's ability to represent and evoke historical events and historical experience differs fundamentally from the representations and recreations of other modes specifically literary and dramatic representations Building on the work of performance scholars such as Joseph Roach Rebecca Schneider and Diana Taylor and in consultation with recent debates in the philosophy of history the book will be of interest to a wide range of scholars and researchers particularly those working in the areas of opera studies and performance

Video Art Historicized Malin Hedlin Hayden,2016-03-03 Video art emerged as an art form that from the 1960s and onwards challenged the concept of art hence art historical practices From the perspective of artists critics and scholars engaged with this new medium art was seen as too limiting a notion Important issues were to re think art as a means for critical investigations and a demand for visual reconsiderations Likewise art history was argued to be in crisis and in need of adapting its theories and methods in order to produce interpretations and thereby establish historical sense for moving images as fine art Yet as this book argues video art history has evolved into a discourse clinging to traditional concepts ideologies and narrative structures manifested in an increasing body of texts Video Art Historicized provides a novel insightful and also challenging re interpretation of this field by examining the discourse and its own premises It takes a firm conceptual approach to the material examining the conceptual theoretical and methodological implications that are simultaneously contested by both artists and authors yet intertwined in both the legitimizing and the historicizing processes of video as art By engaging art history s most debated concepts canon art and history this study provides an in depth investigation of the mechanisms of the historiography of video art Scrutinizing various narratives on video art the book emphasizes the profound and widespread hesitations towards but also the efforts to negotiate traditional concepts and practices By focusing on the politics of this discourse theoretical issues of gender nationality and particular themes in video art Malin Hedlin Hayden contests the presumptions that inform video art and its history

Dating Acts in its Jewish and Greco-Roman Contexts Karl Leslie Armstrong,2021-01-14 There has been consistent apathy in recent years with regard to the long standing debate surrounding the date of Acts While the so called majority of scholars over the past century have been lulled into thinking that Acts was written between 70 and 90 CE the vast majority of recent scholarship is unanimously adamant that this middle range date is a convenient political compromise Karl Armstrong argues that a large part of the problem relates to a remarkable neglect of historical textual and source critical matters Compounding the problem further are the methodological flaws among the approaches to the middle and late date of Acts Armstrong thus demonstrates that a historiographical approach to the debate offers a strong framework for evaluating primary and secondary sources relating to the book of Acts By using a historiographical approach along with the support of modern principles of textual criticism and linguistics the historical context of Acts is determined to be concurrent with a date of 62 63 CE
