Bootstrap New Urbanism Design Race And Redevelopment In Milwaukee Comparative Urban Studies:

Bootstrap New Urbanism Joseph A. Rodriguez, 2014-08-26 Joseph A Rodriguez critically examines the urban design and revitalization initiatives undertaken by both the government and the people of Milwaukee Wisconsin In the 1990s New Urbanists followed a city tradition of using urban design to solve problems while seeking to elevate the city's national reputation and status While New Urbanism was not the only design element undertaken to further Milwaukee's redevelopment the elite focus on New Urbanism reflected an attempt to fashion a self help narrative for the revitalization of the city This approach linked New Urbanist design to the strengthening of grassroots community organizing and volunteerism to solve urban problems Bootstrap New Urbanism Design Race and Redevelopment in Milwaukee uncovers a practice with implications for urban history architectural history planning history environmental design ethnic studies and urban politics

New Urbanism and Neighborhood Revitalization Joshua R. Vitulli, 2012 HOPE VI neighborhood revitalization grants focus limited government resources in distressed communities to facilitate neighborhood change and transform urban neighborhoods into vibrant communities HUD collaborated with the Congress for New Urbanism to develop principles for urban design to guide neighborhood revitalization Inherent to this partnership is the assumption that urban design facilitates social economic development Multiple cross site analyses and case study research evaluate the ability of new urbanism principles to initiate meaningful neighborhood revitalization Critics of new urbanism inevitably find fault in outcomes while new urbanists invariably document evidence of success This research attempts to reconcile divergent ideologies to evaluate HOPE VI neighborhood revitalization projects by the design standards prescribed by new urbanism if new urbanism principles are successfully implemented in HOPE VI neighborhood revitalization projects new urbanism is responsible for the outcomes This research expands on existing theory to measure the relationship between new urbanism design and neighborhood revitalization To minimize claims against validity the study begins with successful HOPE VI neighborhood revitalization projects in Seattle Washington New Holly and Rainier Vista The redevelopment projects both recipients of HOPE VI grants are nationally recognized as exemplars of new urbanism Urban design analysis considers each component of new urbanism design guidelines and verifies the presence or absence and effectiveness these principles After analysis confirms HOPE VI redevelopment faithfully implements new urbanist principles the research shifts to social and economic metrics that approximate neighborhood change and neighborhood revitalization Neighborhood change is measured by qualitative indicators that influence neighborhood perception and stimulate private investment Neighborhood revitalization is defined by the ability of a neighborhood to attract capital investment and ensure sustained development The analysis ends with a discussion of social justice related to HOPE VI redevelopment projects The research concludes the New Holly and Rainier Vista redevelopment projects ascribe to new urbanism design principles Social and economic variables identify trends that indicate neighborhood change at New Holly and Rainier Vista but neighborhood change has yet to attract requisite capital to catalyze neighborhood revitalization The findings are constrained by time and external factors discussed in the conclusion and suggest directions for future research The Neighborhood's Catalogue University of Wisconsin--Milwaukee. Center for Architecture and Urban Planning Research,1981 Blight Elimination and Urban Redevelopment in Milwaukee Milwaukee--Redevelopment Coordinating Committee,1948 Rethinking Redevelopment Julian Andrew Escudero Geltman,2017 This article explores unintended consequences of recent urban design initiatives in Cleveland Ohio Historically rife with environmental injustice issues Cleveland s built environment continues to exhibit issues of distributive justice across racialized spaces In this research project I first investigate whether and how New Urbanist aesthetics are geared towards a white spatial imaginary and subsequently deconstructing its whiteness I seek to answer is New Urbanism inherently racist I then explore how New Urbanism in the U S has spread into circles of sustainable urban design pushing space and place towards a homogenized normativity Third I examine the history of racial prejudice in urban planning in Cleveland Lastly I analyze census data surrounding neighborhoods in which sustainable urban design initiatives have been implemented or are underway In analyzing how these neighborhoods are changing as a result of these initiatives I look for the presence of New Urbanist aesthetics or the realization of some their principles and theory I hope to uncover some of the indirect effects of projects deemed sustainable The purpose of this project is to look critically at initiatives that are gauged as sustainable widening the discussion of sustainability in planning and architecture to purposefully encompass factors related to social equity and justice beyond the ones related to environmental sustainability Urban Research Center [report].
