SECTION A: RESPONSE TO CAROL ANN DUFFY, SELECTED POEMS

Carol Ann Duffy's poems are often presented as dramatic monologues which speak directly to the reader and convincingly voice a single character or persona's thoughts. This method delivered by a range of characters, creates a better understanding of the ideas and the underlying message the poet is trying to express and as is common to much of Duffy's writing the themes of dreams and imagination feature heavily. She employs her favoured dramatic monologue to form a bond between the speaker and the reader, taking the poem to a personal level, and this has proved to be extremely effective in conveying the poet laureate's message to the masses as shown by her popularity. Duffy's use of this literary technique when combined with direct, accessible, colloquial language make the speakers seem straightforward in the three poems "The Woman in the Moon", "In your Mind" and "Captain of the 1964 'Top of the Form Team'". In the three poems Duffy employs her favoured form to explore the inner workings of the human imagination and to present her ideas on the place dreaming plays in our lives.

"The Woman in the Moon" is a witty, linguistically playful poem which considers earth from the imagined perspective of the moon as the concerned motherly narrator and ends in a crescendo of foreboding on the serious theme of global warming. It immediately challenges our stereotypical and childhood imprinting with the rhetorical question "How could you ever think it was a man up here?" and the humorous familiar reference to a nursery rhyme "A cow jumped over the". The persona's opening line employs a term of endearment "Darlings" grabbing out attention with the technique of writing a letter from someone we have ignored "Round I go—" but that person has been watching us "I hide behind", "What reached me were your joys, griefs, here's --the- crac ...". Throughout, the persona uses endearment terms "Devoted" which conjure up an imagined impression of a mother watching over her children's lives, their highs and lows of mortal life and culminates in her alarm, frustration and disappointment "what have you done, what have you done to the to the world?". The structure of the poem builds with each stanza. The first with humour reflects our childhood and the second depicts our "brief lives" coupled with the moon's timeless eternal existence "a talented loneliness" but longing "blue". The third focuses on the changing phases of the moon as it orbits the earth and our lives legacy as she keeps turning but also expresses the persona's understanding of our part time exposure to her lunar gazing. Finally, in the fourth stanza it evolves to declare the real message that the moon believes we are awaking to the fact we are destroying "my blue vacation" "sick seas". This stanza with a term of endearment, my darlings, also questions like a disappointed mother if it's too late. The poet employs extensive use of metaphors very effectively and the alliteration "I gaze, gawp, glare," and "sick seas" really stress something is wrong as the sibilant s's contrast with the guttural g's of the previous line for impact. The syntactical positioning of deserts, and caesural pauses add to the overall impact making it for me a hard hitting yet engaging poem in which Duffy uses an imagined persona to induce a sense of guilt also made me personally think about her final message and the inevitable circle my own human life will follow.
