2011-2012 GRANT APPLICATION GUIDELINES

In order to be considered for a grant from the National Institutes of Health, the applicant must be a U.S. or foreign organization. The purposes of grants for research and education studies related to the human condition are to promote and advance scientific knowledge and to improve the health of the population.

The National Institutes of Health also sponsors research proposals that are health-related or support activities, which are funded through a separate process. These proposals are independently evaluated according to panel III, with NCIH's strategic health research priorities, study feasibility and cost, and the applicant's research history for review. Researcher's interest in applying should include a term page proposal summary including the proposed project description, anticipated overall budget, a brief two-year project timeline, and existing resources and facilities for successful project completion. The application for each nation's proposed summary is in Summary II, III, and IV.

Grant applications in terms of NCIH will not be considered. Grant applications will be given priority based on the number issued and the number of applications for the same and will be evaluated first. Researcher's ability for funding, equipment, infrastructure, and other program resources for consideration.

Non-profit organizations interested in submitting a grant request to the National Institutes of Health should contact the NCIH Grant Coordinator. There is no official direct research application form. However, grant requests will not be considered without complete documentation as outlined in the NCIH Grant Guidelines.
