

Chapter 1 Guided Reading Assignment

1. What are science, science theory, and why is it important in biology?
 Research (science) is a method for understanding the natural world. It is a process of gathering information about the natural world, testing hypotheses, and drawing conclusions. It is important in biology because it helps us understand the living world and its processes. A science theory is a well-substantiated explanation of some aspect of the natural world, based on a body of facts that have been repeatedly confirmed through observation and experiment.
2. What does an organism's environment mean, and what is the difference between a community and an ecosystem? Describe the difference between a community and an ecosystem.
 An organism's environment is the sum of all the external factors that affect its life. A community is a group of individuals of different species that live together in a particular area. An ecosystem is a community of organisms and their physical environment, interacting as a system.
3. Describe the process of natural selection.
 Natural selection is the process by which organisms with traits that are better suited to their environment survive and reproduce at a higher rate than those with less favorable traits. Over time, the frequency of the favorable traits increases in the population, leading to the evolution of the species.
4. Label the components of a cell: nucleus, cytoplasm, and organelles.

5. What is a function, and how is it related to structure? Give an example of a function and its structure.
6. For each of the structures below, label the structure and its function. If the structure is part of a system, label the system and its function. If the structure is part of a system, label the system and its function. If the structure is part of a system, label the system and its function.
