LAB

Learning Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts.
- 2. Calculate % of cells in each phase of cell cycle from cell counts.

Background

Hemocytometers are the standard instruments used to measure cell concentration. Hemocytometers consist of a counting surface. The cells are loaded on a glass slide with a known volume of liquid. The cells are then counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

The hemocytometer is used to measure cell concentration. It is used to measure the number of cells in a given volume of liquid. The cells are loaded on a glass slide with a known volume of liquid. The cells are then counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

Part A: Sample Counting Technique

Counting cells with the hemocytometer is a simple task. The steps are as follows:

Using the Hemocytometer

1. Load the cells on the hemocytometer. The cells are loaded on the hemocytometer by using a pipette to add a small volume of the cell suspension to the hemocytometer.

2. Count the cells. The cells are counted under a microscope. The number of cells is then divided by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.

1. Calculate the concentration of the cell suspension. The cell concentration is calculated by dividing the number of cells by the volume of liquid. The cell concentration is then multiplied by the volume of liquid to give the cell concentration.
2. Calculate the percentage of cells in each phase of the cell cycle. The percentage of cells in each phase of the cell cycle is calculated by dividing the number of cells in each phase by the total number of cells.
3. Repeat the steps for each sample.
