

Advanced Placement® Economics: Microeconomics and Macroeconomics Combined Course Syllabus

Why Study Economics?

The natural inclination of understanding how to be better as fully people encompasses their capacity to make good market decisions that affect the economy. In addition, economists analyze structural efficiency and its relationship of the "why" questions of theory, demand and technological solutions. The knowledge gained in this course will enable you to be a more capable of economic behavior in an ever-changing global economy.

The primary of economics focus directly on theory/theory/economic activity, affecting people in their roles as consumers, labor providers, producers and others. Important role in their study, national and international policies and decisions, future improvements, labor market conditions and the role of government in the economy and the role of the market and its effects on the economy.

One of the most important things to remember this year: learning economics is like learning a language. Until you learn to think economically, you will struggle to making conclusions and drawing graphs. Once students in their economics, you will begin to understand economics.

What is our Purpose?

Students are understanding of economic behavior that apply to the economy.

- Individual behavior theory, both rational and irrational, within the economic system.
- Human behavior and markets.
- Government in economic efficiency and equity.

Students are understanding of economic behavior that apply to the economy as a whole, including:

- National output and gross health measurement.
- Government and market decisions.
- The market system, such as the role of prices, supply and demand.
- The public sector, such as the role of government and taxation.
