Biofiltration for Air Pollution Control Joseph S. Devinny, Marc A. Deshusses, Todd Stephen Webster, 2017-11-22 The number one environmental threat to public health air pollution remains a pressing problem made even more complicated by the massive quantity and diversity of air pollution sources Biofiltration technology using micro organisms growing on porous media is being recognized as one of the most advantageous means to convert pollutants to harmless products Done properly biofiltration works at a reasonable cost utilizing inexpensive components without requiring fuel or generating hazardous by products Firmly established in Europe biofiltration techniques are being increasingly applied in North America Biofiltration for Air Pollution Control offers the necessary knowledge to do it right

Indoor Air Pollution Control Using a Soil Biofilter Daisy Badilla, 2024-04-15 Academic Paper from the year 2008 in the subject Physics Biophysics language English abstract Biofiltration may be used to control indoor air pollution In biofiltration contaminants in a gas stream are degraded by microorganisms and converted to carbon dioxide water and biomass In this study the CO₂ production and the elimination capacity EC of toluene at inlet concentrations between 20 and 80 ppm were investigated using three biofilters operated separately with soil as bed material Results showed soil with its rich microflora taken to full advantage without inoculants and additional nutrients biodegraded toluene at removal rates comparable to those in other studies at higher concentrations The quantity of CO₂ produced correlates with the quantity of toluene removed which implies effective biodegradation and suggests stable long term operation at these low concentrations Though the concentrations used in this study are not typical toluene indoor concentrations ppb results show biofiltration may be effective for indoor air pollution control with proper design considering biomass growth or biofilm structure concentration and gas flow rate

Biofilter for the purification of air contaminated with triethylamine (TEA) Venu Gopal,A.G Rao,M.P. Durga Prasad,2014-12-24 Master s Thesis from the year 2012 in the subject Chemistry Bio chemistry course Master Degree language English abstract Modern air pollution control technologies have emerged over the past 40 years to mitigate emission problems in industrial facilities and thereby comply with environmental regulations A variety of technologies have been developed to meet the needs of both the industries and the regulatory agencies keeping in view the techno economics Some air pollutants like H₂S NH₃ and VOC s are emitted in the industry causes odour and this not only causes occupational health but also damages public image of the company Engineered biofiltration is a sustainable technology for VOC and odor control Bio filtration is a method of pollution control in which pollutants are biologically degraded using microorganisms Generally the energy demands for biofiltration are one fourth to one tenth that of physico chemical destructive technologies Biofilters are being developed and effectively used for a wide variety of industries including wood products paint manufacturing petroleum remediation etc Biofilters are cost effective and straightforward options for pollutants capable of biodegrading reasonably easily Triethylamine TEA is a Volatile organic compound widely used as a catalyst for polymerization reactions and a solvent and corrosion inhibitor in industry and it is also used as an intermediate in the production of various chemicals including pesticides It is necessary to remove TEA from water and gas in the environment TEA gas phase bio treatment has emerged as an effective and inexpensive alternative to conventional physicochemical treatment systems The technology is still under development in terms of economics equipment process kinetics and operational skills and different layouts and flow trains are being proposed including biofiltration biotrickling filter and bioscrubber In the present work studies are being carried out on biofilter contaminated with TEA The contaminated gas is passed through a packed bed where TEA compound is absorbed into the biofilm in which diffusion and aerobic biodegradation occur simultaneously in a complex set of physical chemical and biological interactions Therefore selection of suitable microbial consortia and biofilter configuration is very important from commercial perspective 1996 Conference on Biofiltration University of Southern California. Edward Reynolds,1996 1998 USC-TRG Conference on Biofiltration Reynolds Group,University of Southern California,1998* Air Pollution Prevention and Control Christian Kennes,Maria C. Veiga,2013-05-13 Over the past two decades the use of microbes to remove pollutants from contaminated air streams has become a widely accepted and efficient alternative to the classical physical and chemical treatment technologies This book focuses on biotechnological alternatives looking at both the optimization of bioreactors and the development of cleaner biofuels It is the first reference work to give a broad overview of bioprocesses for the mitigation of air pollution Essential
