

LAB 4: INTRODUCTION TO SKELETAL SYSTEM (AXIAL SKELETON)

In this lab you will be introduced to the structure and classification of bones and you will learn the axial skeleton in detail

Prelab

- Label the diagram of the skeleton (p 2) and the long bone (p 3)
- Label the skull diagrams on p 8 and 9
- Label the vertebra on p 11
- Complete pages 1,3, 5, 6, 7,10, 12, 13, 14
- Label the flash cards at the end of this lab (BIG HELPFULHINT: the labelled structures are the same ones mentioned in the text of the lab manual)

Objectives

This lab and the next lab involve a detailed look at the bones of the body. For each bone you are responsible for knowing the following:

1. the names of the bones of the axial skeleton and the bone landmarks (bumps and depressions), as indicated for each bone
2. the location of the bones in the body, and the relevance of the landmarks
3. the structure of a long bone
4. difference between compact bone and spongy (cancellous) bone tissue

Learning the skeletal system in detail will require continual review. Refer to the flash cards, locate the bones and landmarks on your own body, handle the bones in the lab.

AXIAL SKELETON

The skeletal system consists of the axial skeleton and the appendicular skeleton. This lab focuses on the axial skeleton.

Name the 3 main subdivisions of the axial skeleton:

Laboratory Manual of Biomathematics Raina S. Robeva, James R. Kirkwood, 2007-08-28 Laboratory Manual of Biomathematics is a companion to the textbook An Invitation to Biomathematics. This laboratory manual expertly aids students who wish to gain a deeper understanding of solving biological issues with computer programs. It provides hands on exploration of model development, model validation, and model refinement, enabling students to truly experience advancements made in biology by mathematical models. Each of the projects offered can be used as an individual module in traditional biology or mathematics courses such as calculus, ordinary differential equations, elementary probability, statistics, and genetics. Biological topics include Ecology, Toxicology, Microbiology, Epidemiology, Genetics, Biostatistics, Physiology, Cell Biology, and Molecular Biology. Mathematical topics include Discrete and continuous dynamical systems, difference equations, differential equations, probability distributions, statistics, data transformation, risk function, statistics, approximate entropy, periodic components, and pulse detection algorithms. It includes more than 120 exercises derived from ongoing research studies. This text is designed for courses in mathematical biology, undergraduate biology majors, as well as general mathematics. The reader is not expected to have any extensive background in either math or biology. Can be used as a computer lab component of a course in biomathematics or as homework projects for independent student work. Biological topics include Ecology, Toxicology, Microbiology, Epidemiology, Genetics, Biostatistics, Physiology, Cell Biology, and Molecular Biology. Extensively revised and updated to reflect the current state of knowledge in the study of aging this Fourth Edition offers a complete profile of the aging process at all levels from molecules and cells to demography and evolution Written by international experts in current basic and clinical aging research this text includes aspects of individual comparative and differential aging and discussions of theories and mechanisms of aging This invaluable reference illustrates how bodily systems organs and functions are affected with aging describes how genetic and environmental factors influence age related changes and addresses some of the clinical consequences of these changes for health and longevity Well illustrated with numerous tables and graphs this book presents up to date information from internationally renowned experts in various biomedical fields

Morphology Methods Ricardo V. Lloyd, 2001-06-15 The past several decades have witnessed an impressive array of conceptual and technological advances in the biomedical sciences Much of the progress in this area has developed directly as a result of new morphology based methods that have permitted the assessment of chemical enzymatic immunological and molecular parameters at the cellular and tissue levels Additional novel approaches including laser capture microdissection have also emerged for the acquisition of homogeneous cell populations for molecular analyses These methodologies have literally reshaped the approaches to fundamental biological questions and have also had a major impact in the area of diagnostic pathology Much of the groundwork for the development of morphological methods was established in the early part of the 19 century by Francois Vincent Raspail generally acknowledged as the founder of the science of histochemistry The earliest work in the field was primarily in the hands of botanists and many of the approaches to the understanding of the chemical composition of cells and tissues involved techniques such as microincineration which destroyed structural integrity The development of aniline dyes in the early 20 century served as a major impetus to studies of the structural rather than chemical composition of tissue Later in the century however the focus returned to the identification of chemical constituents in the context of intact cell and tissue structure

The Light and Smith Manual Sol Feltz Light, 2007 An immensely useful manual with many attractive features comprehensive and lucid keys precise diagrams annotated checklists and up to date references there is no doubt that it should be seen as an example of the type of manual which is so badly needed in the study of the fauna of many shores around the world Journal of Animal Ecology

Congratulations to the editors contributors and publisher for a job well done The third edition has been rewritten corrected and enlarged so that while retaining the basic organization of the earlier ones it is more useful informative and up to date The meticulous scholarship of Smith and Carlton is just what the revision needed Systematic Zoology This revision should serve for many years It is therefore particularly commendable that the editing has been meticulous perhaps flawless thanks are due to the many contributors for a job well done The Quarterly Review of Biology As the Pacific Coast intertidal zone undergoes increasingly profound changes knowing the sentinel invertebrates can foretell the future of the sea and hence of our species Jim Carlton's hefty new update of The Light Smith Manual the comprehensive compendium of who's who between the tides is the best and quickest way to do so Elliot A Norse President Marine Conservation Biology Institute This much anticipated modernization of Light's Manual is an astonishing accomplishment blending state of the art taxonomy with profusely illustrated and user friendly keys to who's whom on marine shores from its stated boundaries of mid California through Oregon and clearly much further north It's also an informative well referenced read Marine biologists should not leave home without it Robert Paine Professor Emeritus of Biology University of Washington At this time of environmental change and loss of biodiversity species identification has never been more important The fourth edition of Light and Smith is more than just a field guide it is a masterwork of research and description with a strong focus on morphological detail No other book has such a broad scope newly expanded to include even the most obscure taxa The revised keys and beautiful anatomical illustrations make this classic guide more indispensable than ever As taxonomists become extinct there are fewer students to receive the vast body of knowledge accumulated by generations of careful study I hope that the beauty and depth of this guide will inspire a generation of young scientists to continue this critical taxonomic work It will have a place of honor in all marine labs Paul K Dayton Scripps Institution of Oceanography
