Abstract: This study aims to investigate the impact of digital marketing on the sales performance of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) in the retail sector. The research is based on a quantitative approach, utilizing data collected from a survey of 100 SMEs. The study examines the relationship between digital marketing activities (social media, email marketing, search engine optimization) and sales performance (revenue, profit, market share). The findings indicate that digital marketing has a positive and significant impact on the sales performance of SMEs, with social media and email marketing showing the strongest correlations. The study also identifies several challenges faced by SMEs in implementing digital marketing strategies, such as limited resources and lack of expertise. The results suggest that SMEs should invest in digital marketing to improve their sales performance and competitiveness in the market.

Students with individualized learning problems, as well as students with special needs, need to be taught strategies that will help them to learn. These are "learning strategies" and they are not the same as "learning styles."
