2011-2012 GRANT APPLICATION GUIDELINES

In order to be considered for a grant from the National Institutes of Health, the applicant must be a U.S. or foreign organization. The purposes of grants for research and education studies related to the human condition are to promote and advance scientific knowledge and to improve the health of the population.

The National Institutes of Health also sponsors research proposals that are health-related or support activities, which are funded through a separate process. These programs are independently evaluated according to panel III, with NCIH's strategic health research priorities, study feasibility and cost, and the applicant's research history for review. Research is considered in applying scientific evidence to the public, proposed activities, including the proposed project description, anticipated overall budget, a two-year grant budget, a statement of the project, and existing resources and facilities are for successful grant completion. The situation for each nation's proposed research is discussed in the following.

Grant applications in the form of NCIH-2011-2012 will not be considered. Grant applications will be accepted for the following reasons: 1) research funded and 2) research. Applications for the grant will not be evaluated. Research is only for health, equipment, infrastructure, infrastructure, and/or other programs related to research.

For grant applications submitted to the National Institutes of Health, the following guidelines should be followed: NCIH Grant Guidelines. These are the official grant award guidelines. However, grant requests will not be considered unless complete documentation is submitted for the NCIH Grant Guidelines.

- (1) Major activities of the last three years, including research, training, and other activities.
- (2) A brief history of the applying organization along with its mission, purpose, programs, and facilities, and budget for the current year.
- (3) A list of the current Board of Directors.
