A White Teacher Talks About Race:

A White Teacher Talks about Race Julie Landsman, 2009-03-16 Veteran teacher Julie Landsman leads the reader through a day of teaching and reflection about her work with high school students who are from a variety of cultures. She speaks honestly about issues of race, poverty, institutional responsibility, and white privilege by engaging the reader in the experiences of a day in the classroom with some of her remarkable students. Throughout the day we meet bigotry head on, struggle with questions of racial identity, and find cultural conflict in the corridors of the school building. Along the way we come face to face with Tyrone, a young African American student grappling with the realities of discrimination in suburbia. We encounter Sheila, a teenage mother struggling to raise her baby in poverty, and we get to know Sarah, a white girl living on the streets of Minneapolis. Through the author's eyes we begin to understand the complexities of teaching in today's society, and we learn within the pages of this book if only just for a moment what it feels like to be the other. Growing Up White

Julie Landsman, 2008-09-05 Growing Up White is for everyone who wants to know more about our schools, our community, our country, and ourselves. Julie Landsman takes the reader on an inventory of her life, pulling from events and scenes, a set of lessons learned. She discloses honestly and unflinchingly the privileges she has experienced as a white person and connects those to her presence in city classrooms where she taught for over 25 years. As a teacher, Julie made mistakes, learned from them, made more, and concludes that understanding race in America is an ongoing process. Her book is rich with suggestions for working in our schools today where we find a primarily white teaching force and an expanding population of students of color. She believes that these students make our schools rich and exciting places in which to work. Landsman also believes that white teachers can reach their students in deep and positive ways. Because she invites you to go along with her in revealing the basis of her upbringing and her choices, the story itself is engaging. Readers arrive at the final chapters with an appreciation not only for the complexity of our history as individuals around race, gender, and class, but with real hope in education as a way to create a place where all children get a fair chance at success. For many white women teachers and teachers in training who represent the majority of our teaching force today, the issue of race is fraught with discomfort. It may challenge assumptions, evoke a sense of guilt, or give rise to a fear of making mistakes or saying the wrong thing. This book presents the first-person stories of white women teachers who tell us not only how they have grappled with race in diverse classrooms but how they continue to this day to be challenged by issues of color and privilege. These are no stories of heroic feats or achievement of perfection but stories of self-disclosure that lay bare their authors' emotions, ideas, curiosity, vulnerability, and reflections as they engaged with race and challenged practices of color blindness and empathetic distance. Avoiding abstract educational lingo, these teachers come clean about the emotional cost of dealing with racism. White privilege and fear of being racist in our rapidly diversifying schools. Admitting their cultural mistakes, they hope their readers can find a safe place to use theirs for honest dialogue and positive learning In approaching chapter authors for this book the editors asked the writers to ask themselves Will my well being and sense of self be at risk if I tell this story Recognizing what s at stake they wanted writers who would be real with themselves The women in this book hope that their stories will resonate with readers help them feel less alone and give them courage to begin a dialogue with colleagues friends staff and administrators around race concerns Each chapter concludes with a few questions to prompt self reflection at home or for use as exercises to use in small groups or staff development training

Talking About Race Steven Grineski, Julie Landsman, Robert Simmons III, 2023-07-03

What is it that gives many of us White people a visceral fear about discussing race Do you realize that being able to not think about or talk about it is a uniquely White experience Do you warn your children about how people might react to them find store staff following or watching you get stopped by the police for no reason The students of color in your classroom experience discrimination every day in small and large ways They don't often see themselves represented in their textbooks and encounter hostility in school and outside For them race is a constant reality and an issue they need and want to discuss Failure to do so can inhibit their academic performance Failure to discuss race prevents White students from getting a real critical and deep understanding of our society and their place in it It is essential for the well being of all students that they learn to have constructive conversations about the history of race in this country the impact of racism on different ethnic communities and how those communities and cultures contribute to society The need to model for our students how to talk openly and comfortably about race is critical in America today but it is still an issue that is difficult to tackle To overcome the common fear of discussing race of saying something wrong this book brings together over thirty contributions by teachers and students of different ethnicities and races who offer their experiences ideas and advice With passion and sensitivity they cover such topics as the development of racial consciousness and identity in children admit their failures and continuing struggles write about creating safe spaces and the climate that promotes thoughtful discussion model self reflection demonstrate the importance of giving voice to students recount how they responded to racial incidents and used current affairs to discuss oppression describe courses and strategies they have developed explain the n word present exercises and pose questions For any teacher grappling with addressing race in the classroom and for pre service teachers confronting their anxieties about race this book offers a rich resource of insights approaches and guidance that will allay fears and provide the reflective practitioner with the confidence to initiate and respond to discussion of race from the pre school and elementary classroom through high school

Making Race Visible Stuart Greene,Dawn Abt-Perkins,2003-10-26 Grounded in classroom experiences this volume opens new territory on a critical but rarely addressed topic the intersection of race with literacy research and practice

Race Talk in White Schools Mara Simon,Laura Azzarito,2020-11-12 Racial segregation and desegregation practices have deeply impacted the teacher pipeline contributing to historical assumptions of teaching as a white profession The Brown vs Board of Education rulings while couched within a narrative of social progress have instead been a step backwards for racial equity in schools The authors use Critical Race Theory and Critical Whiteness Studies to demonstrate how teachers of color are racialized through the centering of whiteness in schools minoritized in contrast to their white counterparts and de centered through performativities of race and whiteness as ideologies The authors share small teaching episodes from eight Black Latina and Asian female teachers who all work in predominantly white schools illuminating the ways the teachers resisted discourses of whiteness by enacting agency within their teaching contexts From the historical backdrop of racism and segregation to theoretical underpinnings the counterstories of the teachers presented in this book indicate how teachers might utilize their personal experiences of marginalization to problematize invisible racism colorblindness and white neutrality moving towards an empowered sense of self The collective narrative highlights the potential for culturally relevant and sustaining pedagogies to support teachers of color in negotiating whiteness and working for social justice
