Armored of Lyonesse: A Romance of To-day Sir Walter Besant,2020-09-28 It was the evening of a fine September day Through the square window built out so as to form another room almost as large as that which had been thus enlarged the autumn sun now fast declining to the west poured in warm and strong but not too warm or too strong for the girl on whose head it fell as she sat leaning back in the low chair her face turned towards the window The sun of Scilly is never too fierce or too burning in summer nor in winter does it ever lose its force in July when the people of the adjacent islands of Great Britain and Ireland venture not forth into the glare of the sun here the soft sea mists and the strong sea air temper the heat and in December the sun still shines with a lingering warmth as if he loved the place This girl lived in the sunshine all the year round rowed in it lay in it basked in it bare headed summer and winter in the winter she would sit sheltered from the wind in some warm corner of the rocks in summer she would lie on the hillside or stand upon the high headlands and the sea beat crags while the breezes which in the Land of Lyonesse do never cease played with her long tresses and kept her soft cheek cool The window was wide open on all three sides the girl had been doing some kind of work but it had dropped from her hands and now lay unregarded on the floor she was gazing upon the scene before her but with the accustomed eyes which looked out upon it every day A girl who has such a picture continually before her all day long never tires of it though she may not be always consciously considering it and praising it The stranger for his part cannot choose but cry aloud for admiration but the native who knows it as no stranger can is silent The house half way up the low hill looked out upon the south to be exact its aspect was S W by S so that from this window the girl saw always stretched out at her feet the ocean now glowing in the golden sunshine of September Had she been tall enough she might even have seen the coast of South America the nearest land in the far distance Looking S W that is she would have seen the broad mouth of Oroonooque and the shores of El Dorado This broad sea scape was broken exactly in the middle by the Bishop s Rock and its stately lighthouse rising tall and straight out of the water on the left hand the low hill of Annet shut out the sea and on the right Great Minalto rugged and black the white foam always playing round its foot or flying over its great black northern headland bounded and framed the picture Almost in the middle of the water not more than two miles distant a sailing ship all sails set made swift way bound outward one knows not whither Lovely at all times is a ship in full sail but doubly lovely when she is seen from afar sailing on a smooth sea under a cloudless sky the sun of afternoon lighting up her white sails No other ships were in sight there was not even the long line of smoke which proclaims the steamer below the horizon there was not even a Penzance fishing boat tacking slowly homewards with brown sails and its two masts in this direction there was no other sign of man Live Wire Lora Leigh,2011-03 A hero among men a magnet for one woman New York Times bestselling author Leigh delivers the final novel in her Elite Ops series featuring the enigmatic leader Jordan Malone Original Armored of Lyonesse Besant,1891
