

QUANTITY SURVEYING

Quantity survey is a schedule of quantities of all the items of work in a building. Once a construction project is completed or depending on the form of contract upon completion of certain parts of the work, the contractor must be paid for appropriately completed works.

This would then require that the actual works done be somehow estimated or measured for payment purposes.

On the other hand to estimate how much a civil engineering project may cost, the actual quantities of materials, labour, equipment, etc., that is needed for the construction work must be calculated at the beginning of the work. Such work of calculating the amount of materials and other incidentals necessary for the realisation of the work is called quantity surveying.

Quantity surveying is a term or processes used in the construction industry to take measurements of civil works, prepare specifications, and estimate the cost of works either for each trade of work or for the whole project.

The term "surveying" means to inspect, study, review, investigate, assess, and hence "to measure" therefore the term "quantity surveying" means "quantity measuring" as applied to civil engineering projects.

Quantity surveying is the application of standard methods of measurement to quantify the amount of various items in a construction project, for the undertaking of valuation, and certifying payments.
