Earth Science and Applications from Space National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Space Studies Board, Committee on Earth Science and Applications from Space: A Community Assessment and Strategy for the Future, 2007-10-01 Natural and human induced changes in Earth's interior, land, surface, biosphere, atmosphere, and oceans affect all aspects of life. Understanding these changes requires a range of observations acquired from land, sea, air, and space-based platforms. To assist NASA, NOAA, and USGS in developing these tools, the NRC was asked to carry out a decadal strategy survey of Earth science and applications from space that would develop the key scientific questions on which to focus Earth and environmental observations in the period 2005-2015 and beyond and present a prioritized list of space programs, missions, and supporting activities to address these questions. This report presents a vision for the Earth science program, an analysis of the existing Earth Observing System, and recommendations to help restore its capabilities, an assessment of, and recommendations for, new observations and missions for the next decade, an examination of, and recommendations for, effective application of those observations, and an analysis of how best to sustain that observation and applications system.

Human remains and identification Jean-Marc Dreyfus, Élisabeth Anstett, 2015-07-01 This electronic version has been made available under a Creative Commons BY-NC-ND open access license. Human remains and identification presents a pioneering investigation into the practices and methodologies used in the search for and exhumation of dead bodies resulting from mass violence. Previously absent from forensic debate, social scientists and historians here confront historical and contemporary exhumations with the application of social context to create an innovative and interdisciplinary dialogue enlightening the political, social, and legal aspects of mass crime and its aftermaths. Through a ground-breaking selection of international case studies, Human remains and identification argues that the emergence of new technologies to facilitate the identification of dead bodies has led to a forensic turn normalising exhumations as a method of dealing with human remains en masse. However, are these exhumations always made for legitimate reasons? Multidisciplinary in scope, this book will appeal to readers interested in understanding this crucial phase of mass violence's aftermath, including researchers in history, anthropology, sociology, forensic science, law, politics, and modern warfare. The research program leading to this publication has received funding from the European Research Council under the European Union's Seventh Framework Programme (FP 2007-2013) ERC Grant Agreement n° 283617.
