Federal Register, 2014 Code of Federal Regulations, Title 14, Aeronautics and Space, 2011-04-21 Aviation Automation Charles E. Billings, 2018-01-29 The advent of very compact very powerful digital computers has made it possible to automate a great many processes that formerly required large complex machinery Digital computers have made possible revolutionary changes in industry commerce and transportation This book an expansion and revision of the author's earlier technical papers on this subject describes the development of automation in aircraft and in the aviation system its likely evolution in the future and the effects that these technologies have had and will have on the human operators and managers of the system It suggests concepts that may be able to enhance human machine relationships in future systems The author focuses on the ability of human operators to work cooperatively with the constellation of machines they command and control because it is the interactions among these system elements that result in the system's success or failure whether in aviation or elsewhere Aviation automation has provided great social and technological benefits but these benefits have not come without cost In recent years new problems in aircraft have emerged due to failures in the human machine relationship These incidents and accidents have motivated this inquiry into aviation automation Similar problems in the air traffic management system are predicted as it becomes more fully automated In particular incidents and accidents have occurred which suggest that the principle problems with today's aviation automation are associated with its complexity coupling autonomy and opacity These problems are not unique to aviation they exist in other highly dynamic domains as well The author suggests that a different approach to automation called human centered automation offers potential benefits for system performance by enabling a more cooperative human machine relationship in the control and management of aircraft and air traffic

INVESTIGATIONS - Inadvertent In-Flight Slat Deployment - The Near Crash of China Eastern Airlines Flight 583

Dirk Barreveld,2015-11-28 On April 6 1993 a China Eastern Airlines McDonnell Douglas MD 11 flight 583 on its way from Beijing China to Los Angeles California had an inadvertent deployment of the leading edge wing slats while in cruise flight not far from Shemya Alaska The autopilot disconnected and the captain was manually controlling the airplane when it progressed through several violent pitch oscillations and lost 5 000 feet of altitude Two passengers were fatally injured and 149 passengers and 7 crewmembers received various injuries The airplane did not receive external structural damage but the passenger cabin was substantially damaged The National Transportation Safety Board determined that the probable cause of this accident was the inadequate design of the flap slat actuation handle by the Douglas Aircraft Company that allowed the handle to be easily and inadvertently dislodged from the UP RET position thereby causing extension of the leading edge slats during cruise flight Scientific and Technical Aerospace Reports ,1981 Lists citations with abstracts for aerospace related reports obtained from world wide sources and announces documents that have recently been entered into the NASA Scientific and Technical Information Database
