the initial infection is observed. The first stage is incubation, which is asymptomatic in children. The incubation period in adults is 1 to 2 weeks. After incubation, the disease progresses through 3 stages: prodromal, primary, and secondary. The prodromal stage is characterized by malaise, fever, and headache. The primary stage is characterized by the appearance of a rash on the face and trunk. The secondary stage is characterized by the appearance of a rash on the arms and legs. The rash is usually accompanied by itching and is more severe in children than in adults. The disease is usually self-limiting and resolves within 2 to 4 weeks. However, in some cases, the disease can persist for a longer period of time. The disease is caused by the varicella-zoster virus (VZV), which is a member of the herpesvirus family. VZV is a DNA virus that is transmitted by direct contact with the rash or by respiratory droplets. The virus can also be transmitted from a mother to her fetus during pregnancy. The disease is more common in children than in adults, and it is more severe in children than in adults. The disease is usually mild and self-limiting, but it can be complicated by pneumonia, encephalitis, and other serious conditions. The disease is preventable by vaccination with the varicella vaccine. The vaccine is recommended for all children aged 1 year and older. The vaccine is also recommended for adults who have not had the disease or been vaccinated against it.

The figure shows a timeline of the clinical course of varicella infection. The timeline starts with 'Incubation' (1-2 weeks), followed by 'Prodromal' (malaise, fever, headache), 'Primary' (rash on face and trunk), and 'Secondary' (rash on arms and legs). The rash is described as 'itching' and 'more severe in children than in adults'. The disease is 'usually self-limiting' and 'resolves within 2-4 weeks'. It is 'usually mild and self-limiting', but can be 'complicated by pneumonia, encephalitis, and other serious conditions'. The disease is 'preventable by vaccination with the varicella vaccine'. The vaccine is 'recommended for all children aged 1 year and older' and 'also recommended for adults who have not had the disease or been vaccinated against it'.

The figure shows two circular diagrams representing the rash of varicella infection. The first diagram shows a 'rash on the face and trunk' with 'itching' and 'more severe in children than in adults'. The second diagram shows a 'rash on the arms and legs' with 'itching' and 'more severe in children than in adults'. The rash is described as 'usually self-limiting' and 'resolves within 2-4 weeks'.
