Arctic Offshore Engineering:

Arctic Offshore Engineering Andrew Clennel Palmer, Kenneth R Croasdale, 2012-10-04 There is an increasing need to construct engineering structures in the Arctic seas The requirement is principally generated by the oil and gas industry because of the substantial reserves that are known to exist offshore in the Beaufort Sea the Caspian Sea the Barents Sea the Pacific Ocean off the coast of Sakhalin the Canadian Arctic and almost certainly elsewhere Structures have to withstand the severe environmental forces generated by sea ice a subject that is developing rapidly but is still far from completely understood Underwater pipelines have to be safe against ice gouging and strudel scour but also have to be constructed safely and economically The social and human environment has to be understood and respected This important book intentionally takes a broad view and vividly accounts for the many and often subtle interactions between the different factors It is illustrated by case studies of actual projects

The Story of Offshore Arctic Engineering Dan Masterson, 2018-10-29 In the early 1970s new technology was needed to aid in coal oil and gas exploration in the High Arctic in order to see if ice sheets could provide a perfect structural support for roadways airstrips and drilling platforms housing hundreds of workers However little engineering experience was available in this regard This book uniquely relates the human history and the technical innovations developed in this harsh environment through research testing and applying many existing engineering principles to ice structure analysis It offers essential insights into the history of ice engineering for designers university educators and postgraduate students While other studies detail research and testing in the laboratory this text relates the testing development construction and use of ice in real construction conditions Offshore Engineering and Technology, 1982 Fossil Energy Update, 1986
