

Army Leadership and Military Profession

Topic: Politics & Government | Words: 884 | Pages: 3

Introduction

Leadership is a term that refers to the process of motivating and directing people to achieve common goals. It can also be defined as the ability of an individual or group to influence, motivate, and direct others to achieve success (Ciulla, 2020). Army leadership is often associated with strong personality traits such as charisma, assertiveness, and determination. However, the army profession is also based on teamwork and communication principles to support unit members. Leadership is an important factor in the army that allows leaders to help their teams succeed by setting an example, providing guidance, and helping them learn new skills.

Attributes of an Army Leader

Charisma is a controversial attribute that requires army leaders to connect with their teams. They need to be able to convey a message of hope and motivation, and they must be able to inspire their troops. Assertiveness attribute applauds army leaders for being strong-willed and confident to make decisions quickly. They must stand up for what they believe in, no matter how unpopular the decision may seem. Under the attribute of determination, army leaders must have a burning desire for success, no matter the cost. They must be able to stay focused in the face of difficult challenges. Lastly, the attribute on leadership skills claims that army leaders must be able to motivate their team, provide guidance, and manage their resources effectively. They also need to be able to make quick decisions under pressure.
