The BBC and the Public Barrie Gunter, 2024-10-23 This book examines the relationship between the public and the BBC in terms of public use of the BBC and their attitudes towards it. These audience research measures are being used as metrics to assess the value of the BBC to the UK public. Some of the attitudinal measures address perceptions of the BBC's outputs and some examine public views about the way the BBC is funded and managed. The book has been written at a time when the BBC reached its centenary and also the mid point of its latest Royal Charter period. At the time of writing the government had begun a mid term review of its performance as judged by its attainment of objectives set out in that Charter. The Secretary of State for Digital Culture Media and Sport at the time of the mid term review had spoken and written openly about abolishing the TV licence fee and the introduction of a new funding model for the BBC that would be implemented in its new Royal Charter due to be enacted in 2027. Against this backdrop this book examines public opinion about the funding of the BBC and then looks at changing media consumption habits and how these have affected patronage of the BBC's outputs. Ultimately a decision must be taken about the kind of national broadcaster the UK both its government and its citizens would like to keep in the future. Changing the funding model without first defining what the BBC should do and how it should be structured and resourced to do it could result in a messy solution that satisfies and benefits no one. Cultural Specificity in Transnational Television Drama Elke Weissmann, 2025-08-08 Cultural Specificity in Transnational Television Drama examines two European television industries those of Germany and Wales. This book analyses how near global shifts towards the fragmentation of audiences, the convergence of media and the transnationalisation of the television industries impact in culturally specific ways. It shows that these larger developments in the industries intersect with specific local histories and cultures which influence how the changes are experienced and what kind of stories they lead to. Offering a comparative cultural analysis of these two industries and their output and drawing on a variety of methods which include interviews, analysis of published interviews in the trade and other press, some archival research and textual analysis, this book shows that the global shifts in television impact in locally specific ways which implies a continuation and indeed exaggeration of existing cultural differences at the same time as we see increasing collaboration, internationalisation and as a result also homogenisation between nations. This book presents a unique emphasis on both transnationalising and localising tendencies, highlighting the need to maintain analytical focus on the nation in this supposedly post national world. It will be of particular interest to scholars and researchers in contemporary television landscape, literary and film studies, modern languages, philosophy and economics.

Making Young Voters John B. Holbein,D. Sunshine Hillygus,2020-02-20 In 2016 90% of young Americans reported an interest in politics 80% intended to vote Yet only 43% of people between the ages of 18 and 29 ended up actually casting a ballot Making Young Voters investigates what lies at the core of this gap The authors in depth interdisciplinary approach reveals that political apathy is not the reason for low levels of youth turnout Rather young people too often fail to follow through on their political interests and intentions Those with noncognitive skills related to self regulation are more likely to overcome internal and external barriers to participation This book combines theory from psychology economics child development and more to explore possible solutions rooted in civic education and electoral reform This potentially paradigm shifting contribution to the literature of American politics serves to influence not only our understanding of voter turnout but also the fundamental connections between the education system electoral institutions and individual civic behavior in a democracy How young people vote affects not only each individual future but that of the United States and of us all
