Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, supervised, low-impact, aquatic exercise program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The study group consisted of 20 women who participated in the 12-week program, and the control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the program. The study group showed significant improvements in physical fitness and health-related quality of life compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, supervised, low-impact, aquatic exercise program can improve the physical fitness and health-related quality of life of sedentary, middle-aged women.

Abstract. Staphylococcus aureus is a common pathogenic bacterium that causes a wide range of infections. The purpose of this study was to investigate the prevalence of S. aureus in the nasal cavity of healthy individuals. A total of 100 individuals were recruited from a community health center. Nasal swabs were collected and cultured on methicillin-resistant S. aureus (MRSA) agar. The results showed that 45% of the individuals were positive for S. aureus. The study highlights the importance of monitoring the prevalence of S. aureus in the community.
