Adjuvant Therapy For Breast Cancer Cancer Treatment And Research:

Adjuvant Therapy for Breast Cancer Monica Castiglione, Martine J. Piccart, 2009-07-11 Adjuvant treatment is administered prior to or as follow up to surgical procedures for breast cancer Proven success in using medical therapies allowing for breast conserving procedures or reducing risk of occurrence Although there has been much progress towards a cure including the introduction of new targeted therapies metastasizing cancer remains highly incurable Adjuvant Therapy of Breast Cancer I. Craig Henderson, 1992-08-31 The results of randomized trials evaluating the use of early or adjuvant systemic treatment for patients with resectable breast cancer provide an eloquent rebuttal to those who would argue that we have made no progress in the treatment of cancer Many of the tumors that we have been most successful in curing with chemotherapy and other newer forms of treatment are relatively uncommon In contrast breast cancer continues to be the single most common malignancy among women in the western world is increasingly a cause of death throughout Asia and Third World countries and remains one of the most substantial causes of cancer mortality world wide The use of mammography as a means of early detection has been shown to reduce breast cancer mortality by 25 35% among those populations in which it is utilized The use of adjuvant systemic treatment in appropriate patients provides a similar and additional reduction in breast cancer mortality Few subjects have been so systematically studied in the history of medicine and it seems fair to conclude that the value to adjuvant systemic therapy in prolonging the lives of women with breast cancer is more firmly supported by empirical evidence than even the more conventional or primary treatments using various combinations of surgery and radiotherapy Adjuvant Therapy of Breast Cancer IV Hans-Jörg Senn, Richard D. Gelber, Aron Goldhirsch, Beat Thürlimann, 2012-12-06 Advances in breast cancer research achieved through the progress of knowledge and development of new therapies have been translated into improved quality of care for breast cancer patients Clinical investigations and clinical trials have made the largest contribution to the body of knowledge that finds its way to the patient Never before during the past decades of management of breast cancer has there been such a fruitful intellectual cross fertilization of ideas among individuals involved in the generation of hypotheses basic research development of drugs and treatments conduct of clinical trials and statistical evaluation the results of all of which are now translated into progress in clinical care Even issues such as the quality of life of breast cancer patients once the domain for few are now being openly addressed by trials and discussed in a much broader forum The IVth International Conference on the Adjuvant Therapy of Primary Breast Cancer also known as the st Gallen Conference was again attended by more than 800 scientists and clinicians interested in this broad spectrum of breast cancer research and the interactions between such diverse fields of interest and specialties as cancer pathology molecular biology and psychosocial oncology This volume collects findings and conclusions presented at the conference Adjuvant Therapy of Primary Breast Cancer Hans-Jörg Senn, Aron Goldhirsch, Richard D. Gelber, Bruno Osterwalder, 2012-12-06 The ultimate consumer of the data presented at conferences on the primary treatment of operable breast cancer is the patient and when as in this disease the benefits of therapy are relatively modest the availability and interpretation of the data from trials becomes an issue of primary importance. The effects of present treatment are in fact such that more patients relapse despite therapy than are estimated to benefit from it. It is therefore extremely difficult for the physician to recommend unequivocally one particular adjuvant treatment modality for the vast population of women with breast cancer. The interpretation of results from clinical research oriented programs is constantly applied however in the treatment of breast cancer patients outside of clinical trials. From presented or published data many physicians extrapolate indications for the use of a given treatment regimen for their patients perceiving it as the best available therapy. It is essential that the best available therapy be selected individually for each patient. However considering the modest effect of treatment upon outcome it is imperative that those who provide the data, those who are involved in both patient care and clinical research make it known that the best current treatment for the population of breast cancer patients is available within the framework of clinical trials. In this way not only present day patients but also future ones will derive the greatest benefit.

Adjuvant Therapy of Primary Breast Cancer VI Hans-Jörg Senn, Richard D. Gelber, Aron Goldhirsch, Beat Thürlimann, 2012-12-06. This RRCR conference volume marks number six in a 20 year evolution of international conferences on the adjuvant therapy of primary breast cancer. Starting in 1978 a handful of some 80 enthusiastic breast cancer surgeons and oncologists met in a secluded mountain resort near St Gallen in Eastern Switzerland to exchange their early data of some pioneer trials on adjuvant systemic therapy of early breast cancer and to correlate their future research efforts to overcome the frustrating prognostic stagnation of this dominant neoplastic disease in Western females during the past decades. Repeated every 3-4 years these St Gallen International Conferences on Adjuvant Therapy of Primary Breast Cancer have continuously grown in numbers of participants and in normative therapeutic influence by being published in major oncology journals. The last 6th conference having taken place from February 25-28 1998 with more than 1800 attendees from over 50 countries worldwide. What is the fascination of adjuvant therapy in primary early breast cancer and what has changed during the last 3 years since March 1995 to justify another international gathering of this size and of the world's leading experts in the field? There is no question that providing even more effective care and designing appropriate recommendations for the multitudes of patients with so called early breast cancer or at high risk of developing the disease remain highly important public health goals.

Adjuvant Therapy of Breast Cancer V Hans-Jörg Senn, Richard D. Gelber, Aron Goldhirsch, Beat Thürlimann, 1995-12-21. We often hear physicians, health care professionals, politicians and patient advocates that nothing has happened in the treatment of breast cancer since patients with breast cancer, the most frequent neoplastic condition in women in industrialized countries, are continuing to suffer relapse and succumb to this dreadful disease. This negativistic attitude does not seem to be justified but why is the transmission of clinical trial results into general practice and with it progress such a slow process? After many decades of frustrating stagnation of long term survival expectations in all stages of early operable breast cancer treated only by surgery and locoregional radiotherapy adjuvant systemic therapy chemo as well as endocrine treatments clearly showed to significantly benefit in terms of disease free and overall survival This evolution has been extensively expounded on by the Worldwide Oxford Overview and the Expert Consensus Panel at the fourth International Conference on Adjuvant Therapy of Primary Breast Cancer in St Gallen Early Breast Cancer Trialists Collaborative Group 1992 Glick et al 1992 What has happened since then During the past 35 years several new concepts and treatment strategies have emerged and have been studied in various major breast cancer groups and treatment centers worldwide Some of these can already be considered to assist in the primary treatment of operable breast cancer today while others are still undergoing clinical trials for better definition of their practical usefulness

Medical Therapy of Breast Cancer Zenon Rayter, Janine Mansi, 2003-01-09 There have been very significant advances across many areas of the study investigation and treatment of breast cancer This publication surveys how scientific advances have influenced improved and extended therapeutic options The volume spans prevention screening genetics and treatment of pre invasive breast cancer before focusing in depth on management of established breast cancer This includes chapters on the various therapeutic options available and their role in treating breast cancer from the very earliest stage through to advanced and metastatic breast cancer In addition the text looks forward at the potential for emerging experimental strategies to become adopted into medical management in the future The volume concludes with a chapter on palliative care This wide ranging account will be essential for breast cancer specialists trainees in oncology and clinical research scientists

Advances in Breast Cancer Management, 2nd edition William J. Gradishar, William C. Wood, 2013-03-09 The optimal management of breast cancer patients relies on the expertise of a team of medical specialists including radiologists surgeons radiation therapists and medical oncologists Much of the progress in breast cancer management made over the last several years reflects the translation of observations made in the laboratory to the clinic Critically evaluating the impact of new treatment approaches relies on a commitment to well designed clinical trials In this volume Advances in Breast Cancer Management a renowned group of breast cancer experts have been asked to provide their perspective on management issues that directly effect patients on a day to day basis Dr Melody Cobleigh discusses the consequences of estrogen deprivation and the ways of ameliorating secondary symptoms and the potential long term morbidity Drs Haigh and Giuliano review the sentinel lymph node biopsy technique including results from their extensive experience Dr Abram Recht places into perspective the potential benefit of post mastectomy radiotherapy and reviews recent trials that address this issue Dr Dennis Slamon takes from us from the laboratory to the clinic in explaining the development of Herceptin as a paradigm for therapy targeted to specific molecular characteristics of breast cancer tumor cells Drs Nieto Shpall Crump and Pritchard offer different perspectives on the future of high dose chemotherapy with stem cell transplantation as a treatment for breast cancer patients Drs NCI Monographs ,1986 Cancer Treatment Reports ,1986
