For a programmable room thermostat, you choose what time you want the heating to be 'on' and what temperature you want the room to be. The thermostat will then turn the heating on or off to keep the room at the temperature you have set.

Setting a programmable room thermostat to a higher setting will not make the room any warmer than the room is. The room will be at the same temperature as the room is. The thermostat will only turn the heating on or off to keep the room at the temperature you have set.

Setting a programmable room thermostat to a lower setting will not make the room any cooler than the room is. The room will be at the same temperature as the room is. The thermostat will only turn the heating on or off to keep the room at the temperature you have set.
