The Pope iconography situates the content of this newspaper edition around Remembrance Day. It is early November, and such an emblem reveals the significance of British patriotism acknowledging soldiers who have battled in war, particularly with reference to WW1.

The tagline 'BROCK BASTION EDITION' is an emphatic USP underlining the severity and importance of this daily edition. It is clear that something about Tuesday 10th November 2016 is historically significant but clearly a time of mourning rather than celebration.

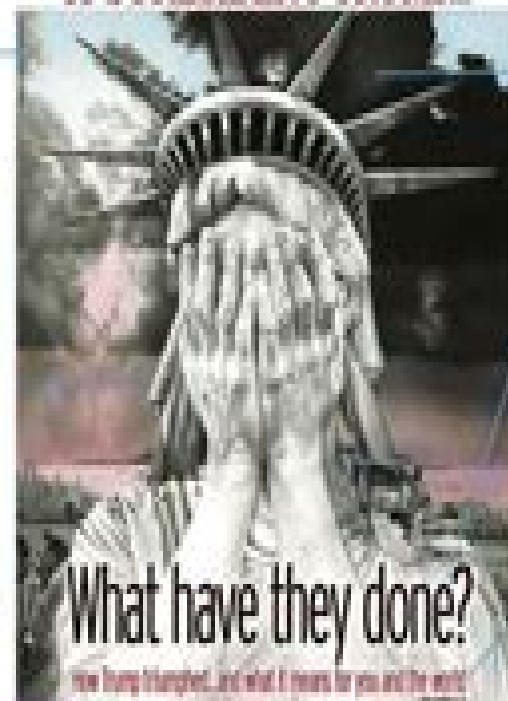

The secondary level 'I killed in speeding train crash' (including an image of an overturned train) features in the top right corner of the cover, acting as a secondary lead to the headline. There is a recurring theme of disaster on the front cover. These narrative selections for the front cover imbue an overarching sense of chaos. The sub-heading 'See Pages 14 & 15' alerts the reader to content inside to find out more. This appeals to the reader's morbid curiosity, where rubbernecking an accident is a societal norm. The sub-heading 'DEADLY' is a pun which could be considered poor taste given the content.

The background of the anchoring image features the silhouetted landscape of New York, with billowing clouds and emanating smoke. There is a subtle allusion to dystopian tales including 'The Man in the High Castle' (which re-imagines New York under Nazi occupation). The dark clouds have ominous foreshadowing connotations. There is a sense that a Trump presidency will act as an omen for a future socio-cultural regression. The artist of this provocative image is Gae Vawter. This could be perceived as post-modern propaganda with a polemical agenda.

The sub-header 'It's President Trump...' features an ellipsis for dramatic effect. This linguistic technique highlights the foreboding horror of a Trump presidency, which is reinforced by the anchoring image below the text.

The anchoring image of the Statue of Liberty with her hands over her face (like teacher concept art) acts as a form of subversive iconography. The artist knows used in order to malign New York's main monument is a politically motivated attack on Trump. The statue is in mourning, rather than celebrating the news. Whilst such an image would seem jarring on another newspaper, it perfectly suits the Daily Mirror's political agenda.

The headline 'What have they done?' is a deeply emotive rhetorical question emphasizing how incandescent the staff and the paper's readers will feel about a Trump presidency.

The sub-heading 'New Trump triumphed... and what it means for you and the world' applies Burton's engine code theory in order to encourage the reader to read and deconstruct the paper's representations. There is an implicit promise, in this sub-heading, that the 'Daily Mirror' will give you the answers you need with a detailed rundown of Trump's political persuasion and its effect on the US and international populace. The 'SEE PAGES 1-17' sub-heading reveals the level of importance this article has, reinforcing how Trump as POTUS is a major event (albeit a negative one according to the connotations of the headlines and anchoring image).

Theoretical Approaches:
Power and media industries - Cunen and Seaton
 → Tension between 'freedom of the press' and an exploitation by the media for profitable agendas.
 → The Trinity Group have maintained their position in the UK market despite falling sales of the Daily Mirror and other mainstream titles by diversifying into regional news. This diverse pattern of ownership has allowed them to create the conditions for more varied and adventurous media products.

Cultural Industries - David Hammond-Haigh
 → The relationship between industry and audience explored.
 → Trinity Mirror group has become a horizontally integrated company with a wide range of titles in order to maximise audiences and minimise risks.
 → Rather than seeing digital media as a threat the company has embraced its digital expansion and now offers digital marketing as well as digital classifieds to generate additional income.

Regulation - Sonia Livingstone and Peter Lunt
 → The tension between ideology and press regulation.
 → The Trinity Group is facing increasing pressure alongside the rest of the UK press industry to adhere to strict rules and guidelines on industry practice. This has arisen after the phone hacking scandal and subsequent Leveson inquiry into the industry.
 → There is an underlying issue of protecting citizens from harmful material while ensuring choice and press freedom.

Theoretical Approaches:
Cultivation Theory - Gerbner
 → Audience exposure to repeated gateways of representation (of Trump and his election campaign) by newspapers may shape and influence their views and opinions.

Reception Theory - Stuart Hall
 → The Daily Mirror is able to promote a hegemonic dominant reading of its viewpoint on Trump's victory through the use of encoding and decoding, which is fully accepted by the reader.

End of Audience - Clay Shirky
 → The conceptualisation of audience members as passive consumers is no longer tenable in the age of the internet with the rise of the prosumer who can create their own content such as submitting stories and being part of forums.

The Daily Mirror left-wing populist tabloid (owned by Trinity Mirror group) with a circulation of 716,000 a year. Falling sales (due to the advent of online media). This is a post-Leveson inquiry newspaper hour where the paper is now monitored by IPSO (Independent Press Standards Organisation). The Daily Mirror's target audience, according to MRS and ABC data are predominantly C2DE, over 35 and are working class Labour supporters.
