Awwa Manual Canadian Cross Connection Control Manual:

AWWA Canadian Cross-connection Control Manual, 2021 Cross-connection Control Manual Howard D. Hendrickson, United States. Environmental Protection Agency. Office of Drinking Water, 1989 Recommended Practice for Backflow Prevention and Cross-connection Control AWWA Staff, 2003

Cross connection control is one of the most important barriers in the multiple barrier approach drinking water suppliers use to protect public health. Contamination of a drinking water distribution system through a cross connection often results in immediate adverse health effects, illness, or even death. This Manual provides a total cross connection control program for your water system. The manual explains how cross connections and backflow can occur and tells you how to choose, install, and maintain backflow prevention devices. You will learn the water purveyor's legal responsibilities as well as the customer's responsibilities in backflow prevention. The manual covers risk assessment, types of programs to consider, and program administration. Until the cross connection control program is fully developed, the water purveyor is at maximum risk of potential liability. This Manual also explains the hydraulics of backflow, the two types of backflow: backsiphonage and backpressure, and the conditions that can cause backflow and a potential cross connection such as a water main break. You will get expert guidance in selecting and installing backflow prevention equipment and learn the 10 main types of backflow prevention devices or assemblies, yes, they are different, and the relative effectiveness of each type against backsiphonage, backpressure, and low and high hazards. The manual describes each device or assembly, its application in a water system, installation requirements. Detailed assembly test procedures are included for the different types of devices and assemblies. This Manual recommends backflow prevention equipment for installation in the water distribution system as well as raw water storage reservoirs, chemical feed pumps and injectors, filters, surface washers, saturators, and dry chemical solution tanks, sampling lines, hose bib connections, and membrane systems.

Drinking Water Distribution Systems National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Water Science and Technology Board, Committee on Public Water Supply Distribution Systems: Assessing and Reducing Risks, 2007-01-22

Protecting and maintaining water distribution systems is crucial to ensuring high quality drinking water. Distribution systems consisting of pipes, pumps, valves, storage tanks, reservoirs, meters, fittings, and other hydraulic appurtenances carry drinking water from a centralized treatment plant or well supplies to consumers' taps. Spanning almost 1 million miles in the United States, distribution systems represent the vast majority of physical infrastructure for water supplies and thus constitute the primary management challenge from both an operational and public health standpoint. Recent data on waterborne disease outbreaks suggest that distribution systems remain a source of contamination that has yet to be fully addressed. This report evaluates approaches for risk characterization and recent data and identifies a variety of strategies that could be considered to reduce the risks posed by water quality deteriorating events in distribution systems. Particular attention is given to backflow events via cross connections, the potential for contamination of the distribution system during construction and repair activities maintenance of storage facilities and the role of premise plumbing in public health risk The report also identifies advances in detection monitoring and modeling analytical methods and research and development opportunities that will enable the water supply industry to further reduce risks associated with drinking water distribution systems AWWA Manual ,1966 Manual of Cross-connection Control ,1993 Water Quality & Treatment: A Handbook on Drinking Water American Water Works Association,James K.
