The Use of Overseas Doctors in Providing Out-of-Hours Services Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Health Committee,2010 In 2004 new arrangements for out of hours general practice were introduced as part of a new General Practitioner GP contract with the aim of addressing inadequate standards and difficulties in retaining doctors in general practice Many consider the new system an improvement on its predecessor but it has some serious weaknesses In particular the use of EEA doctors and the failure to check their language skills and clinical competence has led to poor clinical care and deaths of patients It is on this aspect that this report focuses Access to Health Care Martin Gulliford,Myfanwy Morgan,2013-05-13 To what extent can we have truly universal comprehensive and timely health services equally available to all Access to Health Care considers the meaning of access in health care and examines the theoretical issues that underpin these questions Contributors draw on a range of disciplinary perspectives to investigate key aspects of access including geographical accessibility of services socio economic equity of access patients help seeking behaviour organisational problems and access methods for evaluating access Access is considered in both a UK and international context The book includes chapters on contrasting health policies in the United States and European Union Access to Health Care provides both health care researchers as well as health professionals managers and policy analysts with a clear and wide ranging overview of topical and controversial questions in health policy and health services organization and delivery

Improving services and support for people with dementia Great Britain: National Audit Office,2007-07-04 Dementia is a term for a range of progressive terminal organic brain diseases including Alzheimer s Some 560 000 people in England are estimated to have dementia with a steeply rising trend over the coming years Some 476 000 people are unpaid carers of people with dementia Direct costs to the NHS and social care are currently at least 3.3 billion a year but the overall annual economic burden is estimated at 14.3 billion This report examines what health and social care services are available for people with dementia and their unpaid carers in England and whether they are providing effective and good quality support Until 2005 the Department of Health attached little priority to dementia and progress was hampered by a lack of good quality data by stigma and by the low level of political and national focus on older people s mental health The NAO conclude that services are not currently delivering value for money to taxpayers or people with dementia and their families Whilst health and social care services are spending significantly on dementia spending is late too few people are being diagnosed or being diagnosed early enough Early interventions that are known to be cost effective and which would improve quality of life are not being made widely available Services in the community care homes and at the end of life are not delivering consistently or cost effectively against the objective of supporting people to live independently as long as possible in the place of their choosing The rapid ageing of the population means costs will rise and services are likely to become increasingly inconsistent and unsustainable without redesign Recommendations cover improving diagnosis and early intervention improving management of services gearing the system to respond to the major challenges of dementia in the future Department of Health Great Britain, Dept. of Health Staff, 2005 Stroke is one of the top three causes of death in England and a leading cause of adult disability with costs to the NHS of about 2.8 billion a year and to the wider economy through lost productivity disability and informal care of around 4.2 billion This NAO report looks at whether the NHS is providing effective and high quality stroke care services in England in terms of acute response rehabilitation and prevention as well as examining the role of the Department of Health in managing and supporting stroke care programmes Key findings include that although progress is being made the priority afforded to stroke care by the Department of Health and the wider health service should be increased given its impact and cost in order to help reduce the number of deaths improve recovery rates increase NHS efficiency and lead to significant financial savings More emphasis should be given to primary and secondary prevention measures with improved patient access to rehabilitation and support services following discharge and more effective integrated emergency stroke care services National Audit Office (NAO) - Department of Health: Emergency Admissions to Hospital: Managing the Demand - HC 739 Great Britain: National Audit Office, 2013-10-31 Many emergency admissions to hospital are avoidable and many patients stay in hospital longer than is necessary Improving the flow of patients through the system will be critical to the NHS's ability to cope with future winter pressures on urgent and emergency care services At a time when NHS budgets are under significant pressure the number of emergency admissions to hospitals is continuing to rise albeit at a slower rate than in the past More patients attending major A & E departments are now being admitted to hospital In 2012/13 over a quarter of all patients attending major A & E departments were admitted up from 19 per cent in 2003/04 The rise in emergency admissions is dominated by patients who stay less than two days short stay in hospital The main factors behind the increase in emergency admissions include the slowness with which the NHS has developed effective alternatives to admission to hospital There are many local initiatives to prevent avoidable emergency admissions but limited evidence on what works A lack of alignment between hospitals and community and local services in the hours they are open compromises efforts to avoid out of hours hospital admissions and prolongs the length of stay of inpatients Among the NAO's recommendations is the need for both short and long term strategies to address staffing shortages in A & E The Department and NHS England should also address barriers to seven day working in hospitals such as the consultants contract which gives consultants the right to refuse to work outside 7am to 7pm Monday to Friday National Health Services of Western Europe Guido Giarelli, Mike Saks, 2023-08-14 This book draws on research within neo Weberian and neo institutionalist perspectives to critically analyse National Health Services NHSs in Western Europe Exploring the challenges posed by neo liberal policies it also looks at the impact of the role of the state the medical profession the public and the medical industrial complex in their development Bringing together a top line range of expert international contributors this book includes national studies from three European macro regions Britain Scandinavia and the Mediterranean In the first part the NHSs of each country considered are examined historically and in a contemporary context in face of emerging challenges from cost containment to governance The second part looks across the macro regions at the influence of the main actors involved in their evolution and sustainability Comparing and contrasting the NHSs of Western Europe the book ends with a discussion of future directions This book makes a vital contribution at a time when health services globally have been under great pressure in the wake of the COVID 19 pandemic It is written for academics and advanced students of healthcare management public policy social policy and sociology in addition to health professionals and policymakers

NHS pay modernisation Great Britain: National Audit Office,2008-02-28 Each year general medical practices provide some 290 million consultations The new contract implemented in April 2004 but increased spending began in April 2003 changed the basis for commissioning primary care services Instead of contracting with individual General Practitioners GPs Primary Care Trusts PCTs commission services from some 8 325 GP practices with around 33 000 GPs This study examines the negotiation and implementation of the new contract and how well it is working in practice In the first three years the PCTs spent 1 76 billion 9 4 per cent more than the minimum committed by the Department of Health Mostly this was due to an underestimation of the amount that GPs would earn from the pay for performance scheme the Quality and Outcomes Framework QOF and the additional cost of providing out of hours care most GPs have opted out of providing this service GPs salaries have increased by an average of 58 per cent Practice nurses have not benefited to the same extent While the number of consultations with patients has increased these are not in proportion with the increase in costs and productivity has fallen by 2 5 per cent per year GPs are working less hours Some progress has been made in extending the range of patient services reduced administration high quality care and linking pay and performance and staff satisfaction and morale Progress has not yet been demonstrated in productivity and re designing the services around patients The contract has contributed to improved recruitment and retention of GPs The NAO recommends that the Department develop a strategy for yearly negotiations on the QOF which should be based more on health outcomes PCTs should provide more services based on local need and review the number and skills of staff employed to commission and performance manage GP services with the aim of improving local commissioning

Causes of Action Pascoe Pleasence,Great Britain: Legal Services Commission,Nigel Balmer,Legal Services Research Centre,Alexy Buck,2006-03-23 Civil law provides a framework within which people conduct their daily lives and civil court cases often relate to problems that affect people s basic life opportunities and well being This is the 2nd edition of this publication which sets out the key findings of surveys conducted in England and Wales in 2001 and 2004 the most extensive of its kind so far undertaken to examine people s experiences of civil law problems including exploring social economic and health consequences Issues discussed include the links between the civil justice system crime and social exclusion the relatively infrequent use of formal legal processes and the obstacles that can prevent problems being resolved

End of Life Care Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Committee of Public Accounts,2009 This report

examines the scale and quality of end of life care the current and future approach to commissioning and funding of services and the capability and capacity of NHS and social care staff to provide such care In England approximately half a million people die each year Around three quarters of deaths follow a period of chronic illness such as cancer or heart disease where people may need access to end of life care End of life care services seek to support those with advanced progressive incurable illness to live as well as possible until they die The provision of end of life care is becoming increasingly complex often requiring a complex mix of health and social care services End of life care is delivered by many people including families and friends specialist palliative care staff and generalist staff such as doctors nurses and social workers for whom end of life care represents a varying proportion of their role There are no full estimates of the full financial cost of end of life care but in 2006 07 primary care trusts estimated they spent 245 million on specialist palliative care delivered by around 5 500 staff with specific training in the management of pain and other symptoms Most people would prefer not to die in hospital but a lack of NHS and social care support services means that many people do so when there is no clinical need for them to be there The Department of Health published its End of Life Care Strategy in 2008 which commits additional funding of 286 million over two years and aims to increase the availability of services in the community and develop the skills of health and social care staff
