Architecture Of The Panama Canal Zone Civic And Residential Structures And Townsites:

Architecture of the Panama Canal Zone Edith Crouch, 2014 The civic and residential architectural structures spanning the early decades of the 1900s through the 1960s that defined America's presence in the Panama Canal Zone are examined Through over 1000 images and detailed text explore the major civic architectural achievements including the Beaux Arts styles Administration Building and Prado Gorgas Hospital Balboa School YMCA Union Church and the Panama Railway Station Residential architecture is also looked at including the re purposing of the French structures that remained from France's efforts to construct a sea level canal and the permanent concrete block mid century houses built for employees and their families An array of renowned American architects and architectural practices created these civic and residential structures including James Renwick Jr Austin W Lord Bertram Goodhue Delano Aldrich Edward Durell Stone and Skidmore Owings Merrill This book is a great resource for architecture and history lovers The Panama Canal Review, 1950

The American Civic Architecture of the Panama Canal Zone, 1910-1920 Delta Ruth Lightner, 2004 Panama Canal Townsites Panama Canal Museum, 2017 When the United States took on the building of the Panama Canal in 1904 workers were faced with extremely difficult living conditions The tropical diseases such as malaria and yellow fever plagued them just as they had the earlier French effort The housing stock left behind by the French was dilapidated and inadequate About a hundred sets of beautifully drafted architectural plans left by the French came in handy for locating drains etc as the Americans made repairs to existing buildings Some workers found insect ridden rooms in adjacent towns while others lived in tents or thatched huts near construction sites Not wanting to endanger the lives of their families most men left their wives and children behind What started out as a cesspool of disease and loneliness eventually emerged as a little piece of paradise for its Canal Zone residents This book tells some of the stories of the various townsites scattered along the fifty miles of the Panama Canal Zone between the Atlantic and the Pacific Oceans It also shares the fond memories of a few of its residents whose hometowns have changed since the Panama Canal was turned over to Panama on December 31 1999 and the Canal Zone as they knew it was no more Urban Development and the Panama Canal Zone Graciela Arosemena Díaz, Almyr Alba, María Sánchez de Stapf, 2023-09-27 The construction of the Panama Canal at the beginning of the twentieth century created an enclave that ran parallel to the interoceanic waterway controlled by the US government the Canal Zone This book aims to understand the implications that Panama Canal Zone urban planning had on human health natural resources and biodiversity through the study case of Fort Clayton highlighting how the sanitary concerns shaped building regulations and the urban landscape of towns This book highlights the role of North American entomologists and health workers in developing control strategies for diseases transmitted by mosquitoes and how mosquito's ecology determined building regulations that shaped the image of the Canal Zone towns On the other hand the book determines the environmental assessment of Fort Clayton determined by the two fundamental aspects that set on the environmental impact of an urban settlement The first one is the suitability of the site's location The second is the urban structure of the adopted city model and its impact on the connectivity of the surrounding forests during the twentieth century This text is aimed at both undergraduate and postgraduate students architects urban planners historians and environmental science professionals

Destiny by Design Jeremy Sherman Snapp, 2000 Author photographer Jeremy Snapp has produced a dramatic photo essay of rare images that depict events in the decade preceding the opening of the Panama Canal in 1914 Original photos taken by Snapp's great grandfather Gerald Sherman a respected mining engineer of the day deliver a technical perspective of this undertaking unlike anything previously published Finally as the U S ceded authority over the canal to the Panamanian government in 1999 Jeremy Snapp travelled to the canal zone with an antique camera to capture images of the original buildings and construction relics that remained

Environmental and Conceptual Factors Affecting Building Design and Landscape in the Former United States Canal Zone, Panama Laura Michele Wilhelm, 2011 The Panama Canal Zone existed as a secluded U S owned territory with its own governmental structure from 1914 1999 The physical spaces created and modified by Canal Zone resident employees were indicative of a unique society There were three basic building phases the initial establishment phase 1900 1920 which focused on establishing a U S presence in the region and constructing the Panama Canal the post establishment phases 1930s 1950s which saw many significant social and political changes in the Canal Zone and the pre modern phase 1970s which was a time of modernization and change During this initial establishment phase building design and arrangement took sanitation imperatives into consideration communities were planned based on a system of segregation and defense of the canal and Canal Zone was a major consideration Building considerations during the post establishment phase related to expansion and municipal improvements the advent of climate control technology an end to subsidized food and housing for Canal Zone residents and defense Factors affecting building design during the pre modern phase included segregation desegregation modernization and administrative changes after the Carter Torrijos treaties which required the canal and Canal Zone to be turned over to Panamanian authority in 1999 In addition to a unique style of building design and arrangement there were perceptions of the natural environment that were indicative of Zonian society One view and perhaps the earliest in a chronological sense is that the natural environment was the enemy and that civilization was the ultimate example human victory over nature Another later view was that nature could be a source of aesthetic pleasure but it should be controlled and it was the function of society to control the natural environment A final and most recent view is that nature represents a dynamic system of which humans are an inextricable part and that the natural environment needs to be preserved as well as protected from human activity The Panama Canal is now completely run by the Panamanians with less than 5% of the workforce consisting of Zonians and non Panamanians Most Zonians left the isthmus in the years leading up to the turnover A noticeable urbanization of the Zone has occurred since the turnover and residential buildings in the former Canal Zone have been modified in a number of significant ways Utilizing archival research historical and ethnohistorical analysis participant observation and the use of informants this thesis examines the environmental and conceptual factors affecting building design and landscape in the former U S Canal Zone Panama Reports of the Panama Canal Company and the Canal Zone Government Panama Canal Company,1951 Government of the Canal Zone George Washington Goethals,1915 Living and Working in the Canal Zone Panama Canal Company. Personnel Bureau,1958
