Photosynthesis is a process by which plants and other organisms use light energy to convert carbon dioxide and water into glucose and oxygen. The process occurs in the chloroplasts of plants and other photosynthetic organisms. The chloroplast is a specialized organelle that contains the machinery for photosynthesis. The process of photosynthesis can be divided into two main stages: the light-dependent reactions and the Calvin cycle. The light-dependent reactions occur in the thylakoid membranes of the chloroplast and involve the conversion of light energy into chemical energy in the form of NADPH and ATP. The Calvin cycle occurs in the stroma of the chloroplast and involves the conversion of carbon dioxide and water into glucose using the chemical energy from NADPH and ATP.
