

Fear

THE OTHER SIDE IS LOVE

In those moments when we are unable to embrace the unending subtle nature of life, fear can set in. There are many things to fear, but if we can master a few techniques, we have a better chance of feeling empowered to choose in which direction to go and where to put our focus. When the cold tangle of fear is creeping its way toward your heart, shift your attention to something or someone you love, breathe, and BE in that feeling. Keep it simple and keep it REAL. It is a good idea to warm up with 5 rounds of Sun Salutations A or B (pages 70–75) before beginning this section.

1. Warrior 1 (Virabhadrasana I)

Start in Tadasana (page 70) and step or hop your feet wide apart (approximately 4 feet/1.25 meters). Shift your arms out to your sides so that your arms are above your ankles. Turn your left foot to the right at a 45-to 60-degree angle. Turn your right foot to the right at a 90-degree angle. Align your right heel with your left arch or heel. Turn your palms up, and lift your arms straight up, parallel with each other (40).

Turn your torso to the right, facing toward your right leg. Set a focal point (somewhere in the air) reach through your fingertips, lengthening your spine.

As you inhale, bend your right leg. Press strongly into your left heel and engage your core (50).

Align your knees with your arms if possible, or let the knee open wider to accommodate right shoulders. Stay for 3–5 breaths, then straighten the right leg. Repeat on the other side. Hold your hands off your hips to give your arms a break if needed.

Modifications: When you lift your arms, face the palm forward and go your elbows through your mouth, bend the elbows and pull your hands down to either side of your ears with the palms still facing forward (45). This is a wonderful way to release tension in the lower back and activate the strings of energy that is seated in the heart chakra.

You can also step directly into Warrior 1 from Downward Dog (page 73) if you are practicing a vinyasa sequence.

Precautions: You may find that this pose feels better with the support of a wall. If you sit on the floor, place your hands on the wall about 1 foot from a wall, with your hands on your hips. Place your hands on fingertips on the wall when you bend your knees and lean slightly forward (below right).
