Abstract: This study aims to investigate the impact of digital marketing on the sales performance of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) in the retail sector. The research focuses on the adoption and usage of various digital marketing channels, including social media, email marketing, and search engine optimization (SEO), and their relationship to sales growth and customer engagement. The study employs a quantitative approach, utilizing data from a survey of 100 SMEs. The findings indicate that digital marketing adoption is positively correlated with sales performance, with social media and email marketing showing the most significant impact. The study also identifies factors influencing the adoption of digital marketing, such as business size, owner's digital literacy, and access to resources. The results suggest that SMEs should invest in digital marketing strategies to enhance their sales performance and competitiveness in the market.
