Archaeology And Capitalism Archaeology And Capitalism:

Archaeology and Capitalism Yannis Hamilakis, Philip Duke, 2016-06-03 The contributors to this volume focus on the inherent political nature of archaeology and its relationship to power and explore how archaeologists can become more overtly agents of social change for individuals and communities The Archaeology of Capitalism in Colonial Contexts Sarah K. Croucher, Lindsay Weiss, 2011-08-10 The Archaeology of Capitalism in Colonial Contexts Postcolonial Historical Archaeologies explores the complex interplay of colonial and capital formations throughout the modern world The authors present a critical approach to this topic trying to shift discourses in the theoretical framework of historical archaeology of capitalism and colonialism through the use of postcolonial theory This work does not suggest a new theoretical framework as such but rather suggests the importance of revising key theoretical terms employed within historical archaeology arguing for new engagements with postcolonial theory of relevance to all historical archaeologists as the field de centers from its traditional locations Examining case studies from North America South America the Caribbean Africa Australia the Middle East and Europe the chapters offer an unusually broad ranging geography of historical archaeology with each focused on the interplay between the particularisms of colonial structures and the development of capitalism and wider theoretical discussions Every author also draws attention to the ramifications of their case studies in the contemporary world With its cohesive theoretical framework this volume is a key resource for those interested in decolonizing historical archaeology in theory and praxis and for those interested in the development of modern global dynamics Historical Archaeologies of Capitalism Mark P. Leone, Jocelyn E. Knauf, 2015-05-27 This new edition of Historical Archaeologies of Capitalism shows where the study of capitalism leads archaeologists scholars and activists Essays cover a range of geographic colonial and racist contexts around the Atlantic basin Latin America and the Caribbean North America the North Atlantic Europe and Africa Here historical archaeologists use current capitalist theory to show the results of creating social classes employing racism and beginning and expanding the global processes of resource exploitation Scholars in this volume also do not avoid the present condition of people discussing the lasting effects of capitalism s methods resistance to them their archaeology and their point to us now Chapters interpret capitalism in the past the processes that make capitalist expansion possible and the worldwide sale and reduction of people Authors discuss how to record and interpret these This book continues a global historical archaeology one that is engaged with other disciplines peoples and suppressed political and economic histories Authors in this volume describe how new identities are created reshaped and made to appear natural Chapters in this second edition also continue to address why historical archaeologists study capitalism and the relevance of this work expanding on one of the important contributions of historical archaeologies of capitalism critical archaeology The Archaeology of American Capitalism Christopher N. Matthews, 2010 Christopher Matthews offers a fresh look at the historic material culture and social meaning of capitalism in this wide ranging and compelling study An Archaeology of Capitalism

Matthew Johnson,1996-01-23 An Archaeology of Capitalism offers an account of landscape and material culture from the later Middle Ages to the beginnings of the Industrial Revolution In tracing some of the roots of modernity back to the transformation of the countryside this book seeks an innovative understanding of the transition between feudalism and capitalism and does so through a unique synthesis of archaeology economic social and cultural history historical geography and architectural history Medieval and early modern archaeology has in the past focused on small scale empirical contributions to the study of the period The approach taken here is both wider ranging and more ambitious The author breaks down the dividing lines between archaeological and documentary evidence to provide a vivid reconstruction of pre industrial material life and of the social and mental processes that came together in the post medieval period in the transition towards modernity Matthew Johnson is careful to avoid a simplifying evolutionary explanation but rather sees the period in terms of a diversity of social and material practices evident in material traces traces that survive and that when reused in different contexts came to mean different things

Archaeology and the Capitalist World System Aron L. Crowell,2013-11-11 This fascinating monograph employs a world system model as the basis for archaeological investigation of Russian America that relates local findings to global patterns Author Aron Crowell examines Russian Spanish and American historical sources along with the archaeological evidence to uncover a preliterate culture that left no written record of its contact with European colonial powers Crowell s particular subject is the indigenous Qikertarmiut people of Kodiak Island off the coast of Alaska The special case of this tribe serves as a microcosm of the history of colonialism demonstrating how early European capitalism impacted and in some cases destroyed indigenous societies

The Plurality of Power Sarah Cowie,2011-02-15 How do people experience power within capitalist societies Research presented here explicitly addresses the notion of pluralistic power which encompasses both productive and oppressive forms of power and acknowledges that nuanced and multifaceted power relations can exist in combination with binary dynamics such as domination and resistance This volume addresses growing interests in linking past and present power relationships engendered by capitalism and in conducting historical archaeology as anthropology The Plurality of Power Industrial Capitalism and the Nineteenth Century Company Town of Fayette Michigan explores the subtle distribution of power within American industrial capitalism through a case study of a company town Issues surrounding power and agency are explored in regard to three heuristic categories of power In the first category the company imposed a system of structural class based power that is most visible in hierarchical differences in pay and housing as well as consumer behavior A second category addresses disciplinary activities surrounding health and the human body as observed in the built environment medical artifacts disposal patterns of industrial waste incidence of intestinal parasites and unequal access to healthcare The third ensemble of power relations is heterarchical and entwined with non economic capital social symbolic and cultural Individuals and groups drew upon different forms of capital to bolster social status and express identity both within and apart from the corporate hierarchy The goal in combining these diverse ideas is to explore the plurality of power relationships in past industrial contexts and to assert their relevance in the anthropology of capitalism

Contemporary Archaeology in Theory Robert W. Preucel, Stephen A. Mrozowski, 2011-10-04 The second edition of Contemporary Archaeology in Theory The New Pragmatism has been thoroughly updated and revised and features top scholars who redefine the theoretical and political agendas of the field and challenge the usual distinctions between time space processes and people Defines the relevance of archaeology and the social sciences more generally to the modern world Challenges the traditional boundaries between prehistoric and historical archaeologies Discusses how archaeology articulates such contemporary topics and issues as landscape and nature's agency meaning and practice sexuality embodiment and personhood race class and ethnicity materiality memory and historical silence colonialism nationalism and empire heritage patrimony and social justice media museums and publics Examines the influence of American pragmatism on archaeology Offers 32 new chapters by leading archaeologists and cultural anthropologists

An Archaeology of Capitalism, 2013 The Hudson's Bay Company HBC a mercantile venture that was founded by royal charter in 1670 conceived constructed and ran Fort Vancouver as its economic center in the Pacific Northwest a colonial outpost at the edge of the company's holdings in North America Research into the history of the HBC revealed that the company was motivated by mercantile interests and that Fort Vancouver operated under feudal land policies while steadily adopting a hierarchical structure Following the work of Marxist archaeologist Mark Leone whose work in Annapolis Maryland explored the effects of capitalist ideology on archaeological assemblages of ceramics this study sought to locate the material signatures of ideologies in the ceramic assemblages recovered from the Fort and its adjacent multi ethnic Village sites In Annapolis matching sets of ceramics were used as a material indicator of the successful penetration of capitalist ideals of segmentation division and standardization that accompanied the carefully cultivated ideology of individualism into working class households Following this model this study analyzed six assemblages for the presence of matched sets of ceramic tablewares using the diversity measures of richness and evenness. The results of this analysis for five assemblages from households in the Village were then compared to those expected for a model assemblage that was inferred to represent the ultimate model of participation in and dissemination of the same ideals of segmentation and division that recovered from the Chief Factor's House within the fort. Documentary research confirmed that ideology was used to indoctrinate workers into the unique relations of production at Fort Vancouver; however, it was an ideology of paternal allegiance to the company rather than one of possessive individualism as in Annapolis. At Fort Vancouver, the notion of individuality was subtly downplayed in favor of one that addressed the company's responsibility to its workers and encouraged them to view its hierarchy, which was reinforced spatially, socially, and economically, as natural. Analysis of the archaeological assemblages revealed that it is unlikely that the Village assemblages are comprised of complete sets of matching ceramicwares. The lack of these sets is likely the result of the multivalent nature of the economic system at the fort and its distinct ideology of paternalism, as well as the diverse backgrounds and outlooks of the Village occupants themselves who appear to have purchased and used these European ceramics in unique ways.
