Stratton, 2012-09-13 In the United States hospitals annually report over 5 million cases of infectious disease related illnesses clinical microbiology laboratories in these hospitals are engaged in detecting and identifying the pathogenic microorganisms in clinical specimens collected from these patients with suspected infections Clearly the timely and accurate detection identification of these microbial pathogens is critical for patient treatment decisions and outcomes for millions of patients each year Despite an appreciation that the outcome of an infectious disease related illness is directly related to the time required to detect and identify a microbial pathogen clinical microbiology laboratories in the United States as well as worldwide have long been hampered by traditional culture based assays which may require prolonged incubation time for slowly growing microorganisms such as Mycobacterium tuberculosis Moreover traditional culture based assays often require multiple steps with additional time needed for discernment of species and or detection of antimicrobial resistance Finally these traditional slow multistep culture based assays are labor intensive and required skilled clinical microbiologists at the bench Over the past several decades advanced molecular techniques in diagnostic microbiology quietly have been revolutionizing the practice of clinical microbiology in the hospital setting Indeed molecular diagnostic testing in general and nucleic acid based amplification methods in particular have been heralded as diagnostic tools for the new millennium There is no question that the development of rapid molecular techniques for nucleic acid amplification characterization combined with automation and user friendly software has greatly broadened the diagnostic capabilities of the clinical microbiology laboratory These technical advances in molecular microbiology over the first decade of the 21st Century have profoundly influenced the physical structure of clinical microbiology laboratories as
